Jesse Lucas

Hey Jesse! (Jesse's girl!)
This has been one wild year. Your a great guy and I have really enjoyed knowing you. Don't forget the crazy times in Short Story, and English. We will have to play a game of tennis sometime, I know you will win! Have a great Summer and take care.

Lots of love & Luck,
Kathy
Clark

Jesse,
Well, can you believe that the yr. is almost over?
Next yr. we will be Juniors!
You are a super friend and a super person and I'm glad we were in homeroom together.
Ole Mendez was a real hag wasn't she? You really gave her a hard time! Well I guess a real trip! Stay sweet & cute!
Love ya,
Missy

Jesse,

This year has gone by so fast! I was so disappointed that we didn't have any classes together this year. We had so much fun in 9th grade, remember 1st period with Mrs Arnold. I really hope that next year we'll have lots of classes together. You have been a great friend to me. I hope you have a great summer + I hope I see you. Call me sometime. (389-7928)

Love ya,
Karla

P.S. Good luck with the girls (not that you will need any luck!)

P.S. Pizza Hut!

P.S. Stay Cool

Jesse!

I'm really glad I got to meet you this year. We've had some wild times in frontier History. (thanks for all the help you gave me) I hope you have a great summer! Stay out of trouble I know you will.

SALEM HIGH

I thought I was ready for high school. I'd given up all my junior high clothes, books, dreams, and even some of my friends. Having attended Hidden Valley, I wanted to go where all my friends were going, but fate had it that I would go to Salem High School, and I decided that I would become a spirited and exciting high school student. I thought it would happen overnight. But it didn't. It took three long years to catch the "Spirit of '82".

When on August 26, 1979, I first came to Salem High School for orientation, I was overwhelmed at the prospect of spending three years here. But still, I was impressed by the freshly painted walls and clean carpets. Waiting to go into the auditorium, I looked around nervously for a familiar face — ANYONE. I kept thinking of all my friends from junior high. I wondered what they were doing and wished I had just a few of them with me at Salem. Finally, I found a friend from seventh grade. We talked for a few minutes, then listened to the principals speak. Several people told me of each principal's reputation — strict, funny, etc. As usual, these rumors didn't hold up, but it was a place to start. Once we were divided up into homerooms, a cheerleader led us on a tour of the building. We followed, confused but fascinated. Once I thought I caught a glimpse of an nursery school friend, but I was sure she didn't recognize me. I didn't see any old friends; all I saw were new faces, but they were friendly faces, and the teachers were helpful and gave useful advice, such as not to wear crepe-soled shoes unless you wanted to trip in the hall and be correctly tagged "sophomore." When I left at 11:00 a.m., I casually remarked to someone, "I wish I were back in junior high," but my heart wasn't in it. I liked this place. I liked the people. I was catching the Spirit of '82.

It didn't take long for the initial excitement of orientation to wear off, but still, the little things seemed momentous — what to wear the first few days of school, what clubs to join, whom to sit with at lunch. Soon life settled down. I made friends, and the girl from my nursery school wound up in five of my classes, and we quickly renewed our friendship. Our first Homecoming hall didn't win first place — it didn't even win second, but it was a noble attempt for the first year. Our largest display was a sign that read: "The Spirit of '82 will carry us through."

by the sheer monotony of the routine, I longed for another school, another situation, but always when I examined my true feelings, I knew I belonged at Salem, and the Spirit of '82 grew. Somehow I managed to make it through three years — dissecting frogs and worms, lighting bunsen burners, figuring average velocities, struggling over countless thesis statements, and rewriting themes that required revising total paragraphs. I worked log problems and found sines and cosines and tangents until I never wanted to see another table or chart again, and yet even after all the complaints I raged and all the times I wanted to scream in frustration, I knew deep down the inevitable would come — the Spirit of '82 would carry

Even the relentless hours spent on homework began to take on meaning because of the realization that a diploma awaited me in June. I remembered all the friends I'd made, and all the ones I wished I'd made. I knew that a chapter in my life was about to close, and I realized that somehow through the muddle of classes, homework, ball games, club activities, and part time jobs we had built our lives around Salem High school. We worked, we played, we agonized, . . . and we graduated. Somehow the Spirit of '82 had indeed carried us through.

THE SPIRIT OF '82

RELATIONSHIPS

"My friends would have to be more than images in a yearbook."

I knew I had a long way to go to become the spirited high school student I envisioned when I attended my first pep assembly. The gym was so big, and it was filled to overflowing with so many people I had never seen before. I wondered how I could ever get to know even a fraction of them. One girl I knew actually sat down with the yearbook from the previous year and memorized the names that went with the faces. She was really determined to catch the spirit of '82! Somehow I couldn't bring myself to this. There was something too calculated about smiling a cheery "Hi, Joe" to someone I only recognized because of a photograph. No, somehow I knew my relationships with the people at Salem would have to begin with something more substantial than their images in an old yearbook. Gradually, I did match names with faces and, then, faces with personalities. At first, I thought only my peers would constitute my friends. I soon learned, though, that Salem offered a wealth of friends — teachers, principals, guidance counselors, cafeteria workers, custodians, even visitors from the community who often volunteered their time to help with tutoring or to give a talk at a club meeting. By the spring of my senior year, I had formed more friendships than I could possibly have imagined on that long ago day in August of 1979. In all my relationshps at Salem, the spirit of '82 became a reality in a far deeper sense than I had ever counted on.

Like many other teachers, English teacher Mr. Ray Moore was always ready to help with difficult assignments.

The senior class started the year successfully. During Homecoming week, the class won first place in the float competition, first place in the spirit chain competition, and second place in the hall competition.

President John Robertson and vice-president Karen Oakes were members of the S.C.A. executive cabinet. The cabinet met each day during seventh period in Mr. Wright's room. John and Karen worked on many class projects during this time. Karen Oakes was in charge of a student directory which was a service to all Salem High School students. Senior mugs were sold. A talent show took place in the spring.

Singleton reflects on Salem years

Willie Singleton was chosen by the Salem High School Annual staff to give his opinions on the senior year. When asked what he liked about his senior year, he said that he got a chance to look back on all the good times. He said he liked the privileges that he received over the sophomores and juniors. Willie said that what he liked most about this year was meeting and making new friends. We asked Willie if he thought he was really prepared for college and he said that the school has prepared him in some ways and hasn't prepared him in others. He said he was ready to graduate because he gets a chance to get away from high school life. He will get to meet new people; however, he does not want to leave all his friends here. When Willie was asked what he would like to change in this school, he said it would be the many rules. He would like them to be less constricting because the rules made him feel like he wasn't trusted. Willie had one piece of closing advice for the juniors and sophomores; he said that the next two or three years would be the fastest of their lives.

Juniors succeed with class projects

This year the Junior Class officers were as follows: president John Krippendorf; vice-president, Lisa Williams; secretary, Carrie Wiley; treasurer, Kathy Logan. This year the officers led the class in several activities. In the fall, the juniors worked diligently to decorate their hall which came in first in the class competition. Then, the officers, along with their sponsor, began planning for the biggest event of the entire year, the junior-senior prom. Lots of hard work was needed to make money for decorations and refreshments. One of the money making projects was selling magazines. At graduation time, juniors having the highest grade point averages served as ushers and marshals, closing out an exciting and successful year.

SHS' lone girl golfer

Kathy Caldwell, Salem's lone woman golfer, has high hopes for the future. She plans to practice hard and strive to win a scholarship to college. For the present, Kathy hopes to be able to make the team again and qualify for some matches.

She worked hard over the summer and attended some Junior Tournaments for the first time. This past summer she won the Salsbury in her division at Richmond, Virginia. She said that she enjoyed it but that it was a scary experience. She also hopes to be able to win some more tournaments in the future.

When asked about the Salem team, Kathy said that the guys give her a lot of support and that Mr. Layman is "great." He encourages her a lot and motivates her to go out and practice.

Kathy thinks the team's changes are good this year. She said, "We lost Mike Gardner but the team as a whole is older and more experienced."

Kathy has played many courses in the valley, and on her home course, Hidden Valley, she has a handicap of thirteen.

She says she doesn't really have an idol, but both of her brothers, Steve and Greg, have been sort of like her coaches. Both boys are excellent golfers and in the past have helped their school's golf team a great deal.

Riley shares Young Life experiences

The Salem High School annual staff picked Eddie Riley to give his opinions on life around Salem High School. When asked what he liked about being a junior, he said, "It is great." He said he felt it was easy for him to get along with both sophomores and seniors. During the summer of 1981 Eddie went to Colorado with Young Life; He commented on his trip, "It was great; I had more fun in two weeks than I did all school year. On the ride up, it was like a great big family." He said that he would recommend any student who had the chance to make the trip. He was asked it he thought he was ready to grade. He said he had a year and a half to go, and he still had a lot to do. He said he was looking forward to college and a little more freedom! His views about Salem High School were that his junior year was really tough, especially when he compared the junior year to the sophomore year. He couldn't believe how hard some of the subjects were. Eddie had a few ideas about changes in the school. He commented, "Students should have more input about what goes on in the school; they should have more say in what happens to them" He also gave some advice to the sophomores. "Stick in there; it's rough, but it gets a lot better."

Sophomores adjust to Spartan life

During the first weeks of November the sophomore elections were held with the following results: president, Tom McCollum; vice-president, Alison Taylor; secretary, Alison Grasham; and treasurer, Julie Coleman. From the beginning of the year, the officers were active in their efforts to get the Sophomore Class off to a good start. All the officers helped in decorating the sophomore float. The goals of the officers were to promote school and class spirit and to raise adequate funds for class projects. Through the hard work of the officers and the guidance of their sponsor, Ms. Swartz, the sophomores became an integral part of Spartan life.

Keffer is outstanding Sophomore

The honor of being outstanding sophomore this year fell on Steve Keffer. Steve is blind; however, his adjustment to the life at Salem High School has helped make him someone to be admired. Among his many accomplishments include his being a member of The Pride of Salem. Dwayne Moore, the Corps Commander, stated, "I don't think most people realize how much faith and determination he has in himself. I think everyone has really grown with him. We all are very proud of him." Steve has a great sense of humor. He is very independent and does not accept any help if at all possible. His adjustment and his participation in the life of Salem High have made Steve an outstanding member of the Sophomore Class.

The class of 1984 should be very proud of one of their fellow students who has a unique talent. Fifteen year old Al Kaiser is a competitive speed skater.

Al has been in competition for eight years. He is a member of a North Carolina skating team, the High Point Speed Team. Al goes to High Point every weekend to practice his skills. His hard work and devotion have paid off for him. He has won over fifty awards in speed skating, including a second place finish in the two-man relay division at the 1980 National Championship held in Lincoln, Nebraska.

Al is not the only champion skater in the family. His brother Bobby, a 1981 graduate of Salem High School, is ranked fifth in the world of Speed Skating. Bobby Kaiser has traveled all the way to Belgium to pursue success in his talent.

Library aids students and staff

The library staff continued its policy of emphasizing service to both students and staff. To meet the needs of everyone, the library personnel started planning well before the students arrived at the end of August. Equipment was distributed to various locations throughout the building and was ready for teachers' use when they came the first work day. Also, early in the year head librarian Mrs. Elinor Graham spoke to each of the large study halls informing them of library policies so that each student could receive maximum benefit from his library time. In addition, Mrs. Graham, working through the English classes, conducted library orientation classes for all tenth graders. To further aide the library staff in delivering prompt and meaningful service, student aides worked in the library several periods each day, shelving and checking out books and other materials.

Head Librarian Mrs. Elinor Graham found that to keep things running required performing some menial tasks.

The clerical work and typing done by library aide, Mrs. Nancy Mutter, made the librarians' day more productive.

Ms. Phyllis Rarkes often found that much of her time was taken with preparing reports.

Guidance offers many services

The Guidance Department proved to be an important research tool as well as a counselling center for the entire student body at Salem. Students soon learned that the counselors were not only available to give guidance about personal problems but also to supply essential information concerning schedule changes, grade improvement methods, College Board testing, college admissions, and career opportunities. With college days and full-time employment rapidly approaching, students also used the Guidance Information System computer to find job descriptions and opportunity information, college information, and financial aid information.

Once again a tutoring program operated through the Guidance Department. Any student having difficulty in a particular subject area could report to the Guidance Office and receive aid from a fellow student.

PLUS, headed by Mrs. Jane Alger, was a very active organization this year. Twice a month, twenty-four Salem students visited area elementary schools to talk to the students about preparing for further education.

Above all else the Guidance Department endeavored to lead each student in the direction that would be most beneficial to him/her. Students learned that the opportunities the Guidance Department offered them were valuable in helping plan their careers.

Guidance Department Chairman, Mrs. Martha McClure sets up a tutoring program for Salem High students.

Students were often able to compare the offerings of various colleges with the assistance of Mrs. Jane Alger.

Mrs. Grace Draper checks to be certain that a student's permanent record is up-to-date.

Giving careful consideration to a student's query, Mrs. Barbara Kyle pauses before she responds.

Students, such as Barbara Kunkel, frequently secured needed information from the computer as well as from their counselor.

Principal Robert Lipscomb takes a moment from a busy schedule to joke with a student.

Mr. John Holliday was always ready to assist with difficult discipline problems.

Preparing the reports for the State Evaluating Committee was a task from which Assistant Principal John Hall rarely took a break.

Principals share work load

In the spring of 1981 Salem High School lost one administrator and gained another. Mr. Steve Hyer left to take a job in insurance, and Ms. Sandra Hadaway joined the staff as Assistant Principal of Pupil Accounting. One of the new policies for the 1981-82 school year was that students were allowed two excused absences for absences other than those caused by illness or a death in the family.

Good organization allowed the administrators to perform effectively and efficiently their many duties. Under the direction of Principal Robert Lipscomb, Assistant Principals, John Hall, Dale Foster, and Sandra Hadaway shared equally in the duties. Mr. Hall headed the instructional program. His main responsibilities were scheduling and assessing proposed curriculum changes. In addition to these duties, Mr. Hall was in charge of organizing for the state evaluation of Salem High School which took place during the 1981-82 school year. Mr. Dale Foster was Athletic and Activities Director. He organized all sports activities and extra-curricular activities, including clubs, assemblies and field trips. Newcomer Ms. Hadaway was in charge of attendance, including unexcused absences from school and classes and tardies. Strong, efficient leadership created an atmosphere where both students and teachers could assume and carry out their responsibilities.

Carrying out her responsibility of pupil accounting, Mrs. Sandra Hadaway inquires why a student missed his morning classes.

Athletic and Activities Director, Mr. Dale Foster, stayed on the phone continually to arrange the season's sports calendar.

Secretaries, aides

Mrs. Mackie Walker, takes a moment to read the paper before her busy day as bookkeeper begins.

Administrative secretary, Mrs. Janie Entsminger prepares to file some papers.

Preparing transcripts for some senior students was only one of Mrs. Shelby Lucas' duties as guidance secretary.

Attendance secretary, Mrs. Beverly Sellers prepares the daily absentee list.

take the pressure off

Mrs. Mary Wells, head of reprographics, looks up from her task of preparing the supply inventory.

The school's secretaries once again played an important part in helping the days run smoothly. For 180 days the secretaries kept the main office under control. They filled their days with organizing the morning and afternoon announcements, typing, filing, answering the phones and keeping track of the principals and students. Mrs. Walker was in charge of all the finances of the school, Mrs. Entsminger was the administrative secretary, and Mrs. Lucas was the guidance secretary. Mrs. Sellers was the attendance secretary.

The aides, too, played an important role in assisting both teachers and principals. Mrs. Gypsy Kropff aided Ms. Susan Preininger in special education and occassionally assisted with typing in the main office. Mrs. Mary Wells worked in reprographics, maintaining the supply inventory and keeping a close check on the machines to be certain they were always in operating order. She also helped train some of the business students to run the machines. Mrs. Marion Richardson typed and ran off work for the math, English, physical education and industrial arts teachers.

Mrs. Marion Richardson is on her way to type worksheets for the English Department.

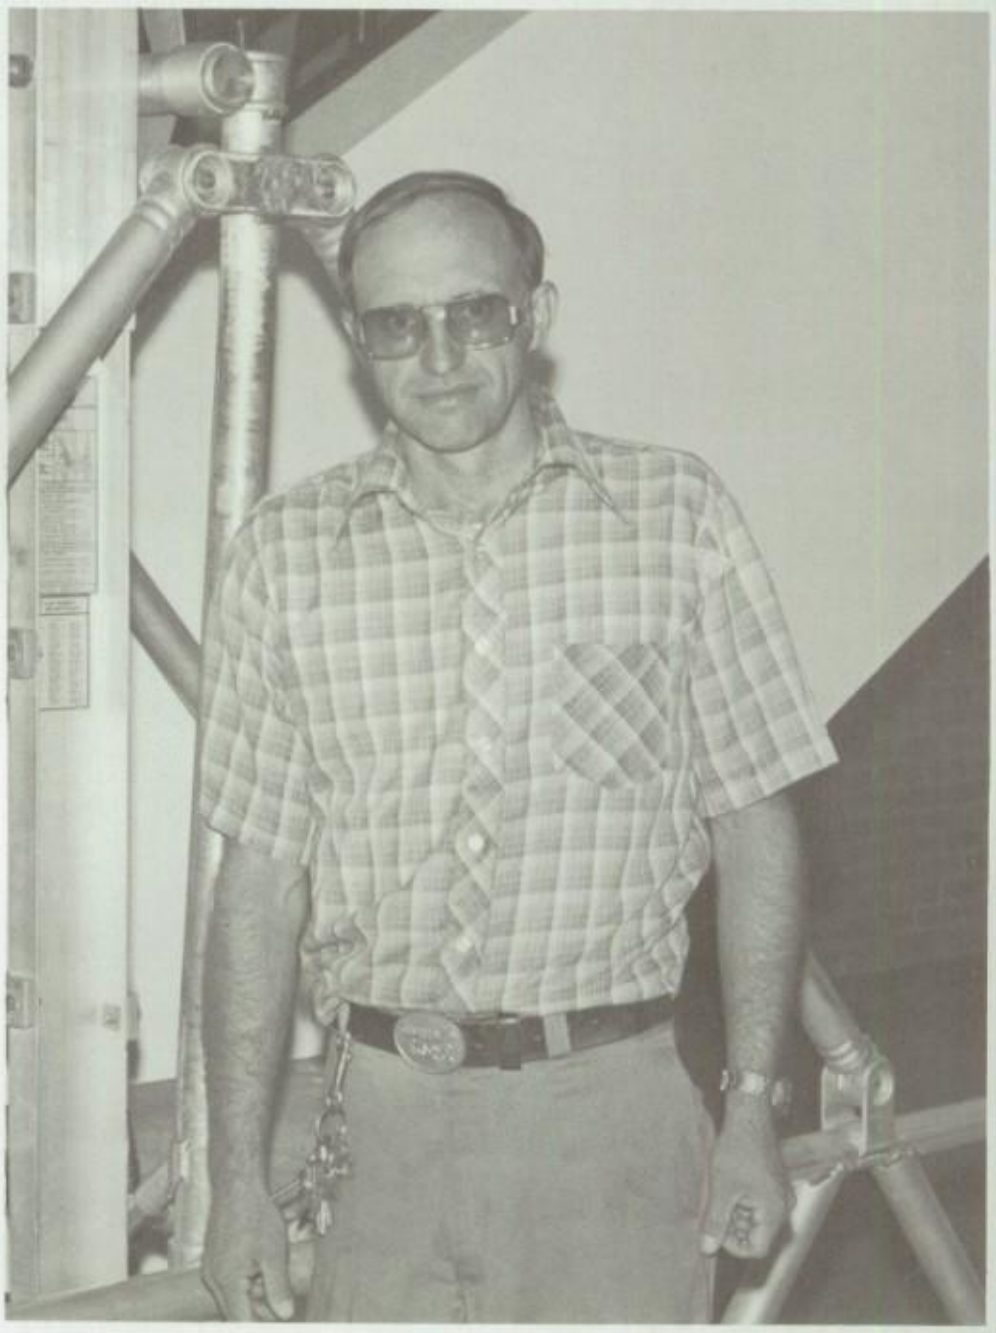
Special education aide, Mrs. Gypsy Kropff runs an errand to the guidance office for Ms. Preininger.

Making our days pleasant

Bess Crawford, Anna Boogs, Ruth Hoffman, Polly Murser, and Martha Martin pause before beginning lunch preparations.

Mr. Marvin Alls, Head Custodian, makes an adjustment on Salem's heating-cooling system.

Custodian, Charles Hodges, pauses after completing a job.



Throughout the year the cafeteria personnel provided hot, nourishing meals five times a day. In the morning hot cinnamon buns, sausage biscuits, and orange juice were all available for those who preferred to have breakfasts at school. Students were still provided with a variety of lunches. They could choose between the complete hot lunch or a lunch of sandwiches and milk shakes.

The custodians, too, worked hard to make the days more pleasant. While mose of us took a break last summer, the custodians of Salem High School had plenty of work to do. There was grass to be mowed, machinery to be repaired, and a whole building to be kept clean.

During the school year the thirteen member team worked constantly, twenty-four hours a day, to keep the school looking like new. There were always lights to be changed, carpets to be cleaned, floors to be swept, windows to be polished, and many other chores to keep the school operating in A-1 shape. When asked about vandalism, Mr. Marvin Alls, head custodian, said, "I think the students here at Salem High School are more cooperative than they have been in the past years and that we have less vandalism here than any other school in this area."

THE SPIRIT OF '82

ROUTINE

"Homeroom seemed to start five minutes earlier with each week."

Looking back, it seems hard to think of the year as separate days; rather, one day seemed to fade into the next, and the year became a collection of memories. Still, there was just no avoiding the monotonous routine. Homeroom seemed to start five minutes earlier every week and by the second nine weeks had become a last minute study period. At some point in the morning, however, I managed to wake up and was completely ready for the day by lunch time.

More appealing than the food were the friends that I passed the fastest thirty minutes of the day with. After lunch, everything was downhill till the end of seventh period when the mad rush for the buses and parking lot began.

On December 18, the last day before Christmas vacation, the entire routine fell apart and didn't return to normal until the first of February. Snow and ice hit the Roanoke Valley just as exams were scheduled to begin, and students found themselves at home with ten extra "review" days.

As much a part of the routine as the school day, were the week ends and part time jobs. I didn't see how some of my friends could work at night and then go home to a pile of books and homework, only to repeat the same grueling routine the next day. Job or not, however, I was always ready for the weekend — a few free hours to relax before another five school days filled my thoughts and time again.

Most students, like Eric Jackson and Elizabeth Dhane, welcomed the thirty minute lunch break.

Spring break . . . in January?!

Everyone was disappointed to see Christmas vacation end, but little did they know that they would suddenly have another break. On the week of January 13th. the snow began to come down. It snowed, and it snowed. This was to be the first of two large snowstorms and a icestorm that gave Salem High School and surrounding schools their spring break in January.

With the exception of January 21, school was cancelled January 13th through 25th. The sudden holiday came just a day before exams were to begin. This offered extra studying time, although many student preferred snow to books.

The large snowstorms provided excellent sleigh-riding opportunities. The Salem and Hidden Valley golf courses were favorite spots. The low temperatures made it possible for skaters to enjoy ice-covered ponds. Many students were able to catch up on their soap operas. The Magic Ballroom supplied entertainment to students who just had to get out of the house. The unexpected spring break in January caused one senior to quip, "We'll be the first class to graduate in August."

Main Street was a winter wonderland during the month of January.

Friday seemed a century away

Some weeks it seemed Friday was a century away. When the last tone finally sounded at three o'clock, Salem students rushed for the buses and their cars, anticipating a few days of fun and relaxation. When the excitement of the football season faded, students turned to other entertainment. A perennial, though expensive, favorite was to roll someone's house. However, with the coming of colder weather, many students adopted more constructive activities and trekked to ski resorts, concerts, and popular area eating places. Saturdays were filled with trips to shopping centers and catching up on what was playing at the local cinemas. Always there was the fun of private parties, which often turned out to be anything but restricted to a guest list.

All too soon the week end was over, and, subdued and resigned, students returned to Monday morning classes.

Many seek relief from the routine

Although the academic requirements for each day were demanding, students found brief periods of time during the day to simply relax and collect their thoughts. As the years passed, they realized that sharing a moment with a friend or catching a breather after class was an important part of every school day. Whether it was chatting with friends in the hall, catching up on the latest happenings in the cafeteria, lounging in the English office, napping in study hall, or exercising in gym class, students managed to incorporate some fun into their day. For the students at Salem High School, Spartan life was a mixture of work and play.

John Robertson, Curtis Taliaferro, and David Epperly could always count on a relaxing few moments in the English office.

One department that could be relied on for a break in the routine was Home-Ec. Here Teresa Firebaugh practices her cake decorating skills.

Tight job market plagues kids, too

Combining school work, a social life, and a part time job was no easy matter as many students at Salem discovered. In an effort to beat the rising costs of everything from a hamburger to a prom dress, students deluged local businesses with applications for employment. Some lucky students were able to arrange their schedules so they could arrive on the job before three o'clock. Others, worked far into the night, only to go home to study for tests and write themes into the wee hours of the morning.

Though such a routine became a drag, most students lucky enough to have a job hung onto it, knowing that another would be hard to come by.

Beneath the glitter: real reminiscing

As Homecoming week began, the halls took on a festive look. Decorations were put around the school, and with each day excitement mounted as students tried to generate the necessary spirit to defeat Fauquier on Friday night.

Each day of the week was a special one. Monday was Western Day; Tuesday, Punk Day; Wednesday, Beach Day; Thursday, 50's Day; and Friday was Stomp 'Em and Color Day. On Monday the SCA sponsored a concert by Freedom Jam. Throughout the week many Alumni came back to Salem High to see all their friends, catch up on the latest news at Salem High and acquaint students with the expectations they would be faced with after graduation. As the reminiscing continued throughout the week, some discovered, beneath the harried activity the true meaning of homecoming.

Senior hall decorations, by night, beckon returning alumni to festivities planned in their honor.

The Homecoming pep assembly was held on Friday, October 10th, the last day of Spirit Week. The students were eager to hear the results of all the contests that they has been involved in. The assembly began with the announcing of the Homecoming Court and their escorts.

After the court was seated on the stage, Marnie Bolt and Evans Halstead were chosen as princess and prince. Finally, the moment arrived when the student body would learn who would be the 1981 Homecoming queen and king. Nikki Clayburn and Bobby Pickle were selected for these honors, and Mrs. Clayburn proudly presented the crown to Nikki. The juniors won the hall contest, and the seniors won the spirit chain contest.

Parade boosts Spartan spirit

The Homecoming parade was one of many festivities highlighting Homecoming Week. At 6:00 Friday evening, students, faculty, and community supporturs gathered along Main Street and College Avenue to view this exciting event. Under the direction of Catherine Chapman, the procession was headed by Salem's Junior Miss Molly Butcher, and foreign exchange students Chiara Barbieri and Melba Sangri. The members of the Homecoming Court, led by Queen Nikki Clayburn, followed in convertibles. The varsity and junior varsity cheerleaders also participated in the parade, boosting the Spartans to victory. Each class displayed its creative talents by entering a class float in the parade. The senior float, "Fry Fauquier," won the competition with the Junior Class capturing a close second place. "The Pride of Salem" added a musical touch to the parade, adorned with flashy uniforms and colorful flags. Following the parade, the fans poured into the stadium to cheer the Spartans to victory over the Falcons of Fauquier.

Win caps Homecoming week spirit

A 12-7 win over the Falcons of Fauquier climaxed the Homecoming Activities. The fans rejoiced as Eddie Riley scored six Spartan points on a pass play and as Rodney Varney plunged in for an additional six points. Spartan spirit remained high during half-time while the band performed in fine fashion as the members of the Homecoming Court were escorted onto the field by their fathers. The finishing touches were added when many students returned Saturday night for the Homecoming dance. Members of the Key Club decorated the gymnasium, using ornaments from the halls. From 8-12 p.m., Windfall, a rock band from Lynchburg, entertained the students. Seniors remembered past experiences with teachers and friends and realized that this would be their last Spartan homecoming as students.

RESPONSIBILITY

"Often I wondered what drove me to be totally sincere in my effort."

Academics, the real reason we were in school, seemed to me to mean such different things to each individual. For me, it was an expression of my individuality; it was my talent, so to speak, and I hoped, the means toward a challenging, perhaps demanding, life's work. I never lost sight of its importance, and though I was sometimes frustrated with some of my classes, I was never really bored.

Despite my generally positive attitude, I couldn't help but speculate about some of my more "laid back" classmates. Often I thought they had things in better perspective than I did. They seemed to know exactly how much to study to get a reasonable, if not distinguished, grade. They certainly seemed to be less up-tight and have more fun than I did. I wondered what drove me to do my best, to be totally sincere in my efforts, to want to achieve so that I could be eligible for a profession that would benefit and serve others. I found no answer. Certainly, I could cite those who were my mentors — parents, classroom teachers, leaders I admired — but often those I admired most seemed overwhelmed and discouraged, too. Often their best and most dedicated efforts, far from reaping recognition and reward, were criticized, misunderstood, and even worse, wasted. But they persevered in spite of everything, and, because of their example, I knew I would, too. I knew that one way or another I had to be one of the ones who made things better, made them work, and for that attitude, I will always be grateful to those who influenced me most.

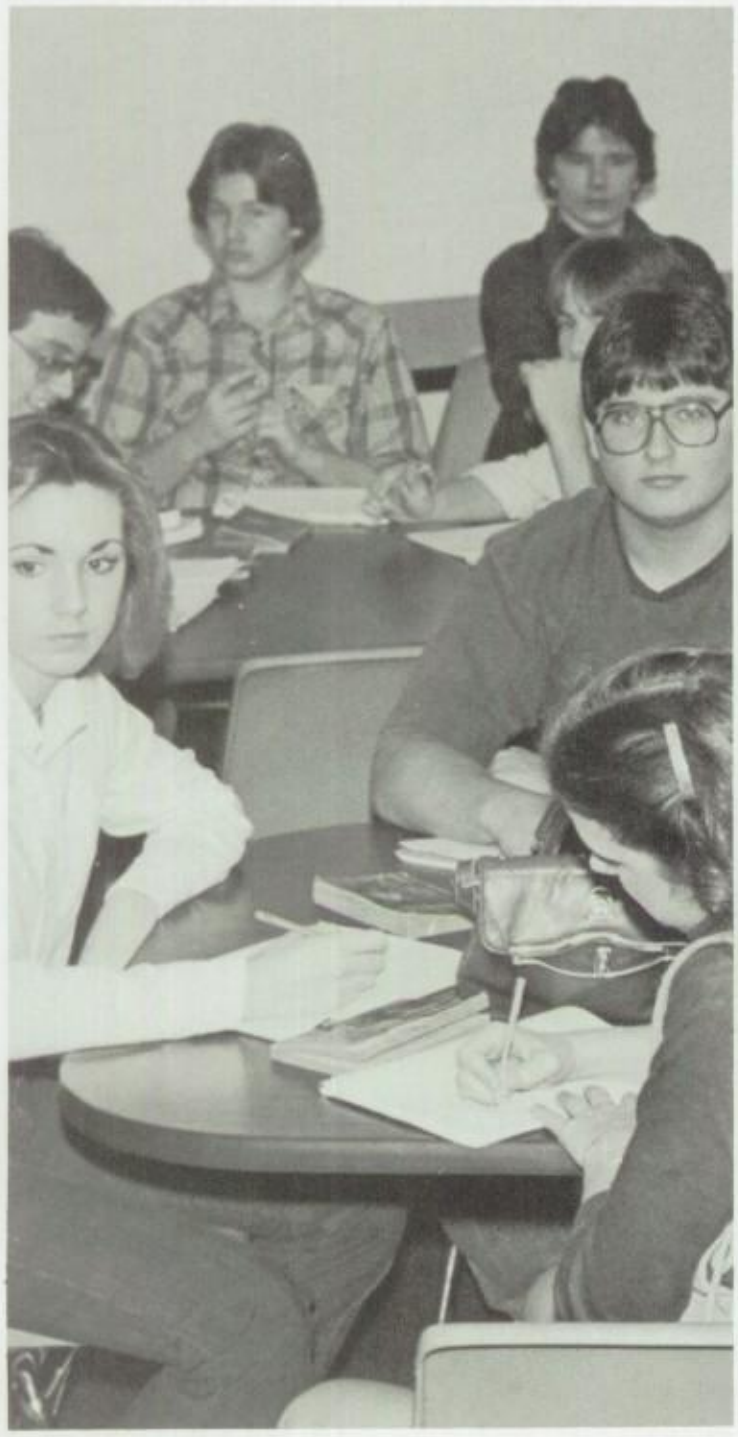
Many teachers at Salem, like Mr. Carl Colley, encouraged a sense of responsibility among students by their willingness to help.

Accelerated programs added

The English Department added a new core course to its list of English courses this year. In addition to the basic English 10, 11, and 12 courses, students had the opportunity to enroll in the accelerated English program, which was offered on the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth grade levels. The students in these courses engaged in an indepth study of literature and grammatical principles. As in years past, students received one half credit for their core English course, and the remaining one half credit was received for an English elective. Approximately seven required options were available from which students could choose for the remaining one half credit.

Unfortunately, the English Department lost the services of the Writer in Residence Program this year. However, many of the students who were interested in creative writing enrolled in the journalism class. Here they developed their writing skills as well as explored the world of newspaper publication.

The English Department shared three of its teachers with other departments. Mr. James Cromer and Mr. Ray Moore were shared with the Social Studies Department, teaching American history and psychology respectively. Mrs. Alice Coulter was shared with the Science Department, teaching astronomy.

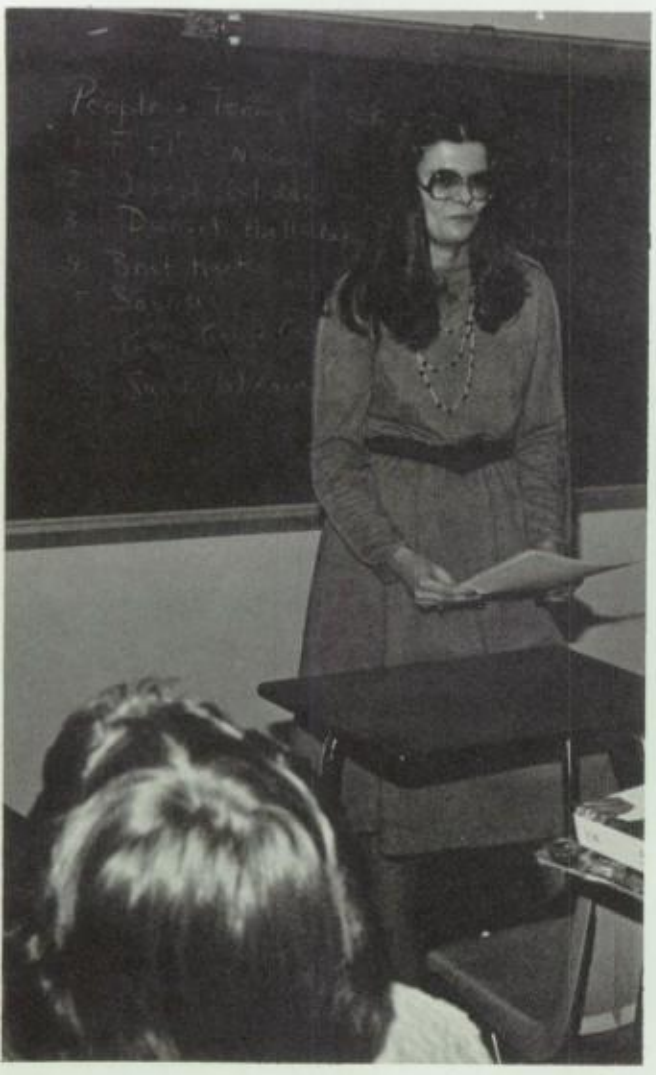


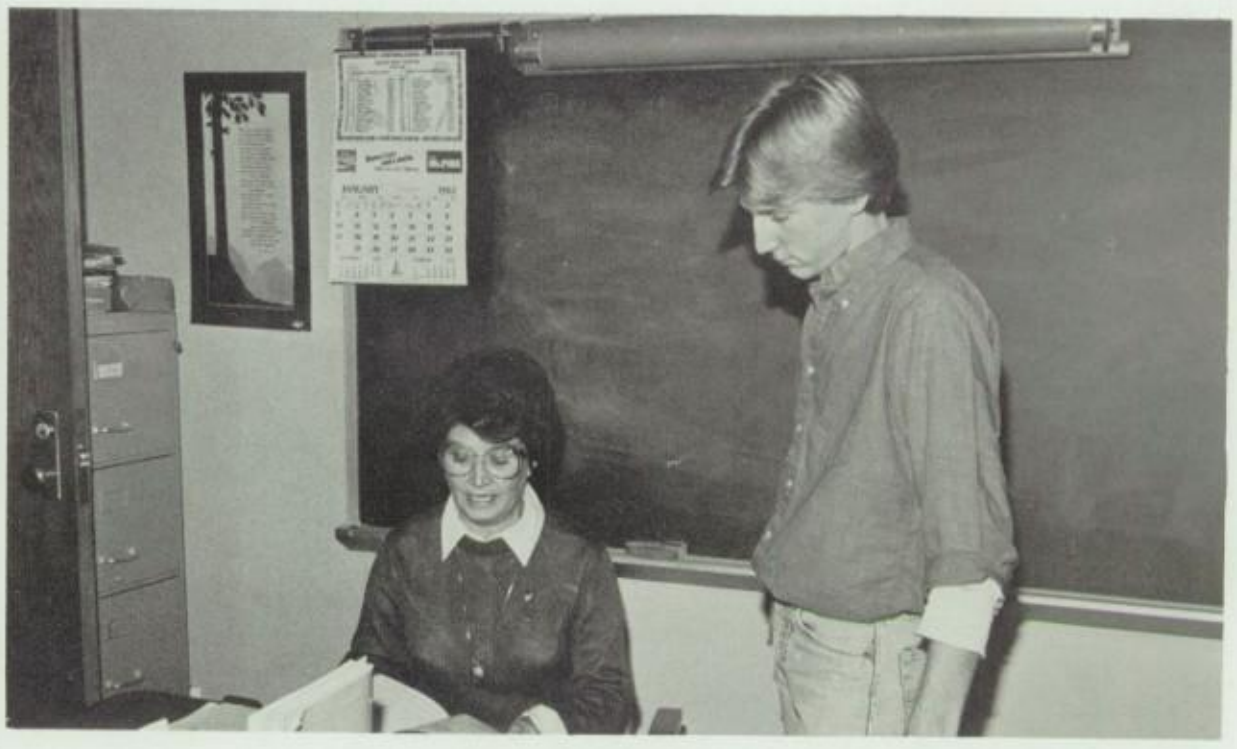
These juniors react as expected when told about their first major theme.

Ms. Ann Thomason insists that all of her students get down her notes word for word.

Editing the copy for the Oracle before sending it to press demands the total cooperation of the entire staff.

Social Studies — an historical adventure





Again this year, the Social Studies Department had the services of four student teachers, each from an area college. Also, the department had three student aides from Virginia Tech.

Semester courses as well as yearly courses were available to Social Studies students. In addition to the required history and government classes, students could take such courses as frontier history, practical law and psychology. The required classes met every day throughout the year; the optional courses met for one semester only.

As before, the practical law students participated in "Moot", a simulated game portraying a drug scene. The students were divided into policemen, dealers, buyers, laywers, and judges. Hot tomale candies were used as drugs and the buyers were given fake money with which to make purchases. Also, the movie Shenandoah was shown to the American History classes in December.

Beginning in mid-January and continuing through March, seven sessions of Presidential Classroom for young Americans were held in Washington, D.C. Ten Salem High School seniors participated in this program. While there, the students attended various seminars and lectures as well as plays and other cultural programs.

In the spring, Mr. John Beach presented his famous "50's" show for the American History classes. With greased back hair and a leather jacket, he entertained the students as he featured historical facts concerning the lifestyle of the 1950's.

The wide variety of classes offered by the Social Studies Department taught students that history and government are continuous processess which affect the lives of everyone.

Work and effort equal success

The Math Department experienced another eventful year. The department was again headed by Mr. Gary Basham. This year Mrs. Linda Arrington worked half of the day at Salem and the other half at Andrew Lewis Jr. High School. In order to meet the needs of the students, a special materials consumer math course was included in the math program. Plans are still being made for the addition of a second semester computer programming course. This course is intended to serve as an independent study course for students wishing to enhance their mathematical inclinations.

Every student enrolled in a math course was able to use the math lab. The math lab was designed to meet the individual needs of Salem High students. The math lab not only served as a tutoring center for students but also as a resource center for the faculty. Salem is one of the few schools in the area that had a lab. The Math department received new textbooks in all courses except Algebra II. These textbooks and the computer facilities were provided to aid students. The computers were used by both computer programming students as well as other students. Many students would go to the math lab and play games or other recreational activities on the computer.

This year many of Salem's students participated in state and national math contests. They attended the Radford College Math Rally and the Virginia Council of Teachers Math contest.

Science department emphasizes relevance

Certain areas of the Science Department experienced an increase in enrollment this year. The number of chemistry classes rose from five to seven, and physics classes increased from two to three. This increase in enrollment was due in part to the basic philosphy of the department which undertook to make science a satisfying and relevant experience.

The department directed its effort's to include a wide range of methodologies, logical processes, and inquiry procedures. As a result, students were encouraged to explore science both in and out of the classroom. Open labs were held before school and in the evenings, and students were given the opportunity not only to make up in-school labs they had missed but also to experiment with ideas of their own. Many students extended their understanding of lab procedures by serving as lab assistants.

Ten elective courses were part of the curriculum. Among these electives were astronomy, anatomy, physiology, and horticulture.

In addition to regular classes and open labs, many students participated in field trips to surrounding colleges, commercial greenhouses, and laboratories.

Versatile program fills many needs

Salem High School's Business Department worked closely with the Future Business Leaders of America. Students had many choices of classes to take in the Business Department. Some students chose simple business classes to complete their credits for graduation; other students with business career goals took the harder business classes.

The curriculum of the Business Department included typing, accounting, general business, and business law. Block courses, designed for two or more years of study, were also included in the business curriculum. These included Stenography I and II, Clerk Typist I and II, business careers, and Office Services I, II, and III. During the second year of study, Mrs. Rae Rhodes, COE coordinator, placed students wanting jobs in a business related position. Other faculty members in the department were Mrs. Julie Graves, Miss Bonnie Keenan, Mrs. Doris Otey, Mrs. Dematris Meador, Mrs. Alyce Sydenstricker, and Mrs. Eleanor Elliott. Mrs. Mary Lou Vaniels provided substitute teaching throughout the first semester in the absence of Mrs. Eleanor Elliott.

A major part of the department was reprographics, which was run by Mrs. Mary Wells. There were many services offered in this division of the Business Department. Teachers were able to provide students with many handouts and tests on the day they were needed.

D.E. directed toward employment

Distributive Education combines classroom instruction with on-the-job training to enable students to gain knowledge and experience in marketing and distribution careers. DE coordinators, Mrs. Sandra Mottley, Mr. John Oberlin, and Mr. John Wall, were able to combine hard work with pleasure. The DE department worked side by side with Salem's DECA club, which is an organization supporting distributive education. Students also participated in various conferences throughout the year. The activities began with the DE Fall Rally. During holidays the department collected food for needy families in the community.

Three years of DE are offered at Salem. DE I prepares students to enter the marketing and distributing field and acquaints them with various careers. In DE II, which is usually eleventh and twelfth grade students, instruction includes advertising and store planning and organization. A combination of classroom instruction and part-time employment is offered in DE III. Students explore the more advanced positions in full-time employment in distribution in this program.

Vo-Tech focuses on employment

As in years past, Arnold R. Burton Vocational Technical School offered a wide range of studies to help in the work-a-day world. Some students went to school for half a day, freeing them for part-time jobs for the rest of the day. Though these students spend their class time at Arnold Burton, they receive their diplomas from Salem High School.

The vocational courses offered are auto body repair, auto mechanics, bricklaying, carpentry, child care, commercial art, commercial food, cosmetology, data processing, drafting, electricity, horticulture, machine shop, and small engine repair.

Drama directs efforts to service

The Department of Dramatic Arts opened the year's schedule with the traditional community service activity which is a series of student written and directed plays co-produced with the Salem Fire Department. These plays are presented in the Salem elementary schools by the Salem High drama students to help the younger students understand fire prevention.

Department members contributed to the self-evaluation of Salem High School by designing and executing the bulletin board which welcomed the visiting committee to the school. This bulletin board presented the map of Virginia on which was located by the use of colored pins each of the 383 Group IA, Group IIA and Group IIIA high schools in the state.

Crossing the language barrier

The Foreign Language Department continued to attract and hold a large number of students. Basic to the department's appeal to students is the effort to teach not only the formal grammar, reading, and speaking skills of a language but the cultural heritage of the country as well. Toward this end, many enjoyable and educational activities were held. Latin students participated in the annual Latin convention, held this year in Norfolk. French and Spanish students also enjoyed specific activities. Spanish students participated in a trip to Fiesta Cantina, and French students enjoyed their annual Mardi Gras party.

Again this year, representatives from the Foreign Language Department visited Salem's feeder schools to acquaint in-coming students with the foreign language program. Prospective students were thus given a chance to ask questions about the instruction of specific languages. Teachers attempted to impress upon prospective students the broadening influence of becoming proficient in a second language.

The foreign language program included courses in first, second, and third year French and Spanish, fourth year Spanish, first and second year Latin, Latin prose and Latin poetry.

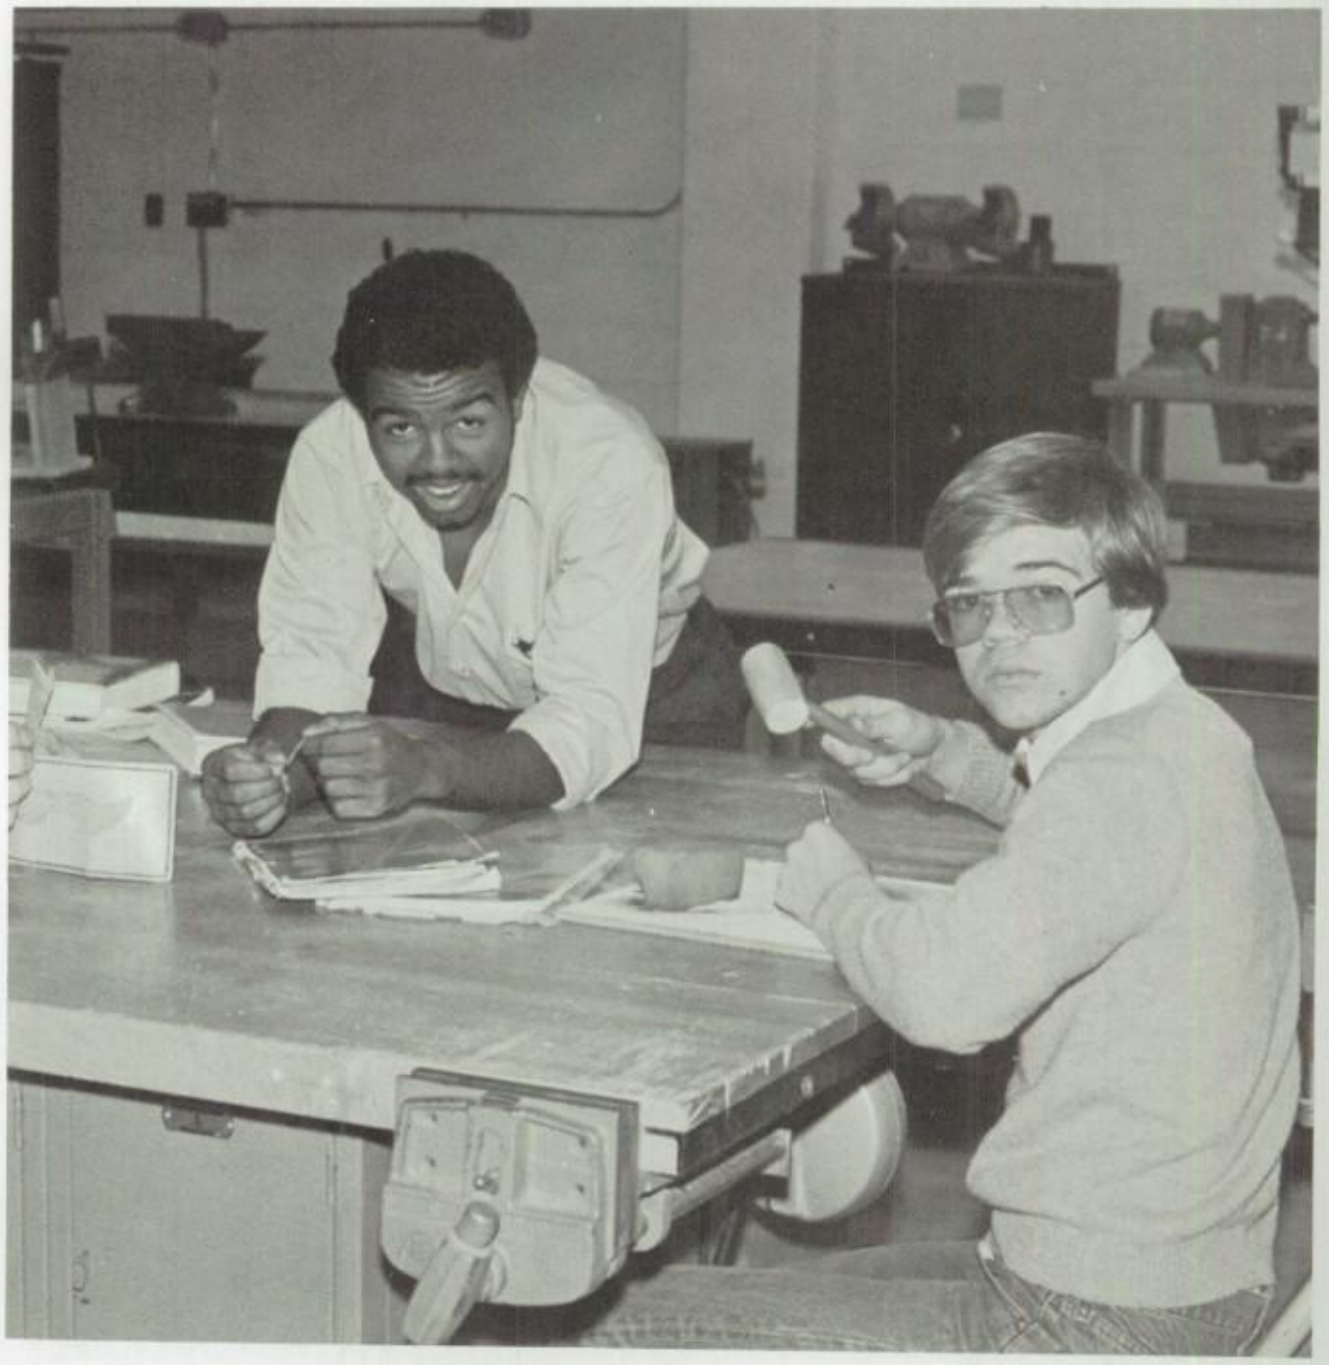
Planning and process emphasized

Because students have shown so much interest in industrial arts, many courses have been made a part of the curriculum. Industrial arts classes this year were taught by three faculty members: Mr. Clinton Scudder, who is chairman of the department, Mr. Wilford Penn, and Mr. Robert Wright.

The classes that were offered were woodmaking, practical home mechanics, auto maintenance, small engines, Technical Drawing I, Technical Drawing II, Technical Drawing III, industrial crafts, which dealt with art metals, sheet metals and plastics. Electricity and photography were also offered.

When a person completed any of these courses, he was expected to know how to approach and plan his work and to have gained a knowledge of how to use a variety of tools and materials.

Industrial Craft students James Jackson and Steve Lacey seem to be at different stages in completing their projects.



Art aids awarness, appreciation

The art program this year was organized so that in introduction to art, students were exposed to a wide variety of projects and media. Advanced students specialized in the area which they found the most interesting in the introductory course. Among the advanced courses were advanced commercial art, advanced painting, advanced crafts, and sculpture. There were approximately 80-90 students enrolled in the art program this year. The department was headed by Mr. John Bullock. Mr. Dave Peterson worked only half day at Salem.

The Art Department, through its various courses, encouraged students to develop perceptual awareness, to interpret their feelings and ideas in visual form, and to develop respect and appreciation of their own efforts as well as the efforts of others.

Home-Ec Department goes co-ed

The Home Economics Department attracts more young men each year. In some cases there were more boys than girls in the class. The family living students prepared a Christmas dinner. This year some students expressed an interest in gourmet cooking. The cake decorating classes spent much time and hard work in learning to be creative.

Home Economics I and II students did some sewing. They made toy mice for their cats and mended some old clothes. Some even did mending outside of class for other people.

These students didn't just eat and sew all of the time. They learned how to set a table properly and some of the finer points of etiquette. Also sewing students learned about fashion designs and what clothes were "in." Most students agreed that the Home Economics Department is one of the places to be to have fun.

Laura Seedman and Tony Terry practice the intricate art of cake decorating.

Fitness was more than a fantasy

This year the P.E. Department had some extra help in the fall of the year. They had three student teachers who eventually took over classes after observing the regular teachers.

Students participated in a number of activities such as tennis, basketball, gymnastics, field hockey, track and wrestling for boys and modern dance for the girls. Also, an aerobics expert came to teach the students the techniques and value of aerobic exercises. Advanced P.E. is for seniors only. There are two divisions of it; one is for team sports, the other for individual sports. These classes took some field trips for skeet shooting and archery.

In the health classes, students learned about occupations in the health field. They also studied the parts of the body and mental and emotional health as well as what constitutes physical well being.

Modern dance students demonstrate poetry in motion.

Chorale strikes up the band

Under the direction of Mr. Bill Snyder, the Chorale, composed of forty members, had another productive year. As early as June, 1981, the officers began collecting information on cruises to the Bahamas. The fall and winter were spent engaging in various fund raising projects which included selling jewelry, sponsoring a Holiday Sampler luncheon, and having a flea market. Despite the group's effort, they were unable to raise the large amount of money — about $500 per person — required to make the cruise. However, the money that was made, was applied to the tour that the group finally decided on. In February, the Chorale made plans to tour Florida.

The Chorale worked hard to build a strong performing group. The Chorale sang for various civic groups and gave winter and spring concerts. The ten new members of the group, all sophomores, quickly adapted to the group and along with the juniors, eagerly anticipated next year. The seniors, though regretting having to leave the group, were able to look back on a job well done.

Part of a planned program

In addition to the Chorale, the Music Department offered vocal ensemble and mixed choir to students who were interested in performing. In a few instances students in these two groups were also members of the chorale.

The vocal ensemble was composed of girls who auditioned for the group. The mixed choir was comprised of both boys and girls. This choir was open to any student who wanted to be a member of a choral group. Both groups presented both a Christmas and spring program during the year.

The Pride of Salem practices with a full dress rehearsal for Friday's game.

Pride of Salem reaches the MBAs

With the Marching Bands of America as their goal, the Salem High School band began practicing last year after school. The band was broken down into sixteen squads, and the horn line received their music so they could learn it before going to band camp.

Band Camp was held August 17th-21st at Salem High School. The members of the Pride of Salem arrived promptly at eight o'clock and worked until five O'clock Monday through Wednesday. On Thursday and Friday members stayed until eight o'clock in the eveing. All during the week band director Mr. Dennis Reaser brought in experienced people from other corps so that new ideas could be incorporated into the band's performances.

Although the group was small this year, only 90 members, the band received Superior ratings in the Chilhowie Apple Festival. Dwayne Moore, the Corp Commander, recieved first place over all the other Corp Commanders in the Virginia Tournament of Bands. The Pride of Salem also attended the Lynchburg Classic, The Parade of Champions, and the MBA competition. The Salem Band proudly brought home several new trophies for their showcase. The Pride of Salem also marched in the Homecoming Parade, Christmas Parade, and Roanoke's Centenial Parade.

The percussion section steps out in style, displaying new outfits.

Rain or shine — practice is the name of the game

The members of the band could be seen trudging diligently up to the field every day after school to practice for Friday night's performance. Sophomores, juniors and seniors in the horn line practiced until 5:00 and the freshmen and Colorguard practiced until 5:30. The squad leaders and generals stayed most days until 6:00, planning what to work on in the next practices.

After-school was not the only time band members worked overtime. The Colorguard practiced all summer long and beginning August 3 all band members rehearsed every day so they could be ready for competitions and for Friday night's half-time show.

Once again this year the band, with Mr. Reaser's guidance, was run by the students. The Corp Commander was Dwayne Moore, and the Generals were Mike Copenhaver as five star, David Downs as four star, Kim Thompson as three star, Tim Witt as two star, and Russ Shock as one star. Because of the dedication of each band member, the corp commander, the five generals and sixteen squad leaders, the Pride of Salem maintained the military discipline and loyalty so necessary to achieve a first rate band.

"In my imaginings, Salem always won or, at worst, lost by a point."

When I realized at the end of my ninth grade year that the next year I would be a Salem Spartan, I was filled with anticipation of exciting Friday night football games. Of course, in my imaginings Salem always won or, at the very worst, lost by an extra point in the last five seconds of play. I also envisioned myself participating in sports and thus being a real part of the Spartan spirit. Neither of these dreams, however, was destined to come true.

In October of my first year at Salem, while trying out for a team sport, I injured my knee and was in a cast for six weeks. I was told to lift weights regularly to strengthen the muscles to take over the work of the torn ligaments. Somehow I was always too busy — or too lazy — to follow through. I dropped sports. I would find other means to be a part of the Spartan way. I turned to Friday night football games. At first, when we lost more games than we won, I thought the slump was just a fluke and that soon the winning Salem tradition would assert itself. Two more seasons, however, proved me wrong. I was forced to look deeper than quick victories and long winning columns for the true Spartan spirit. When in 1980, one of Salem's players suffered a devastating injury, I began to know what kind of spirit sustained Salem. I became part of a great outpouring of friendship and caring, and I knew that all my preconceived ideas about the typical high school experience had been trivial and selfish.

In sports, as in all other areas of Spartan life, the spirit that came in '82 was far different from my superficial imaginings.

Some students, such as Sylvia Martin, illustrated the Spirit of '82 by their diligent and successful pursuit of sports.

Cheerleaders spark spirit of '82

In the spring of last year, the 1981-82 Varsity cheerleaders were chosen. The tryouts were held in front of judges, although the final fourteen selections were made by the student body. During the summer, the varsity cheerleaders attended camp at Radford University. First place was awarded to the Varsity cheerleaders this year. After camp and many days of practicing, the cheerleaders were prepared for the year.

Varsity cheerleaders cheered for football in the fall. The squad was again split into fourteen per squad. Seven of them cheered for football while the others cheered for wrestling. Half way through the year the cheerleaders switched sports. Among the other sports for which they cheered were cross country, track, gymnastics, tennis, golf, and baseball.

Throughout the year, the cheerleaders encouraged pride and spirit among the student body

Spartans' spirit tested in '81

The 1981 football season proved a difficult one for the Salem Spartans. The final record of 1-9 did not represent the hard hitting that took place on the field each Friday night. The season opened with a tough 18-7 loss to a New River Valley power, Blacksburg. Following this opener, the Spartans met their first district opponent, Cave Spring. Although the Spartans took an early 12-0 lead in this game, the Knights put things together in the second half to take a 21-12 victory.

No doubt, one of the hardest defeats for the Spartans was a close 14-7 loss at the hands of the William Fleming Colonels. The Colonels entered the contest as district leaders and as a team filled with talent. The fans witnessed a hard fought game at Salem Municipal Field, but, like the team, were disappointed by the loss. However, in this game the fans did see some of the excellent talent of the Spartans in the playing of Curtis Taliaferro and Jody Sease.

Homecoming at Salem High School was again a time for welcoming back alumni. The week of Homecoming was declared Spirit Week, with hall decorations and float competition. This same spirit carried over to the football team as the Spartans won their first contest of the season over Fauquier High School 14-7. The win marked the second consecutive win for the Spartans over the Falcons. With this win, Salem entered the game with Franklin County hoping for their second victory. Again, the Spartans made the contest a close one but lost 10-0 to the Eagles. Following this loss, the Spartans journeyed to Lynchburg to take on the E.C. Glass Hilltoppers, a team rich in tradition. Glass took an early lead off the Spartans' errors, and Salem was never able to overcome that lead. The final score read 24-7. After a loss to Pulaski 10-7, the Spartans ended the 1981 season with a 34-7 loss to district opponent Northside.

Naturally, the season was a hard one for the Spartans to accept. The losses never really give a complete picture of what any football team does. They do not show the long, hot two-weeks of camp which the team participates in at Alta Mons. They do not show the afternoon of practices which usually do not end until 6:30. Nor do they show the weekends given to game films and game plays by the coaching staff.

Salem will lose some good talent to graduation including All-Metro defensive players Jody Sease and Curtis Taliaferro. However, with a strong contention of rising juniors and seniors, the Spartans can look forward to next year's campaign.

Team earns tournament bid

The lady Spartans bumped their way into the Roanoke Valley District Volleyball Tournament by capturing third place in the regular season play. The team enjoyed a 7-5 regular season record, losing only to the Knights of Cave Spring and the Patriots of Patrick Henry. This impressive record assured them a place in the district tournament. The Spartans won their match in the quarterfinals, but, unfortunately, they were once again sticken by Patrick Henry in the semi-finals.

The team was led by captains Cathy Russell and Debbie Rae. Coach Connie Thurston was impressed with the team's play and is looking forward to working with next season's team.

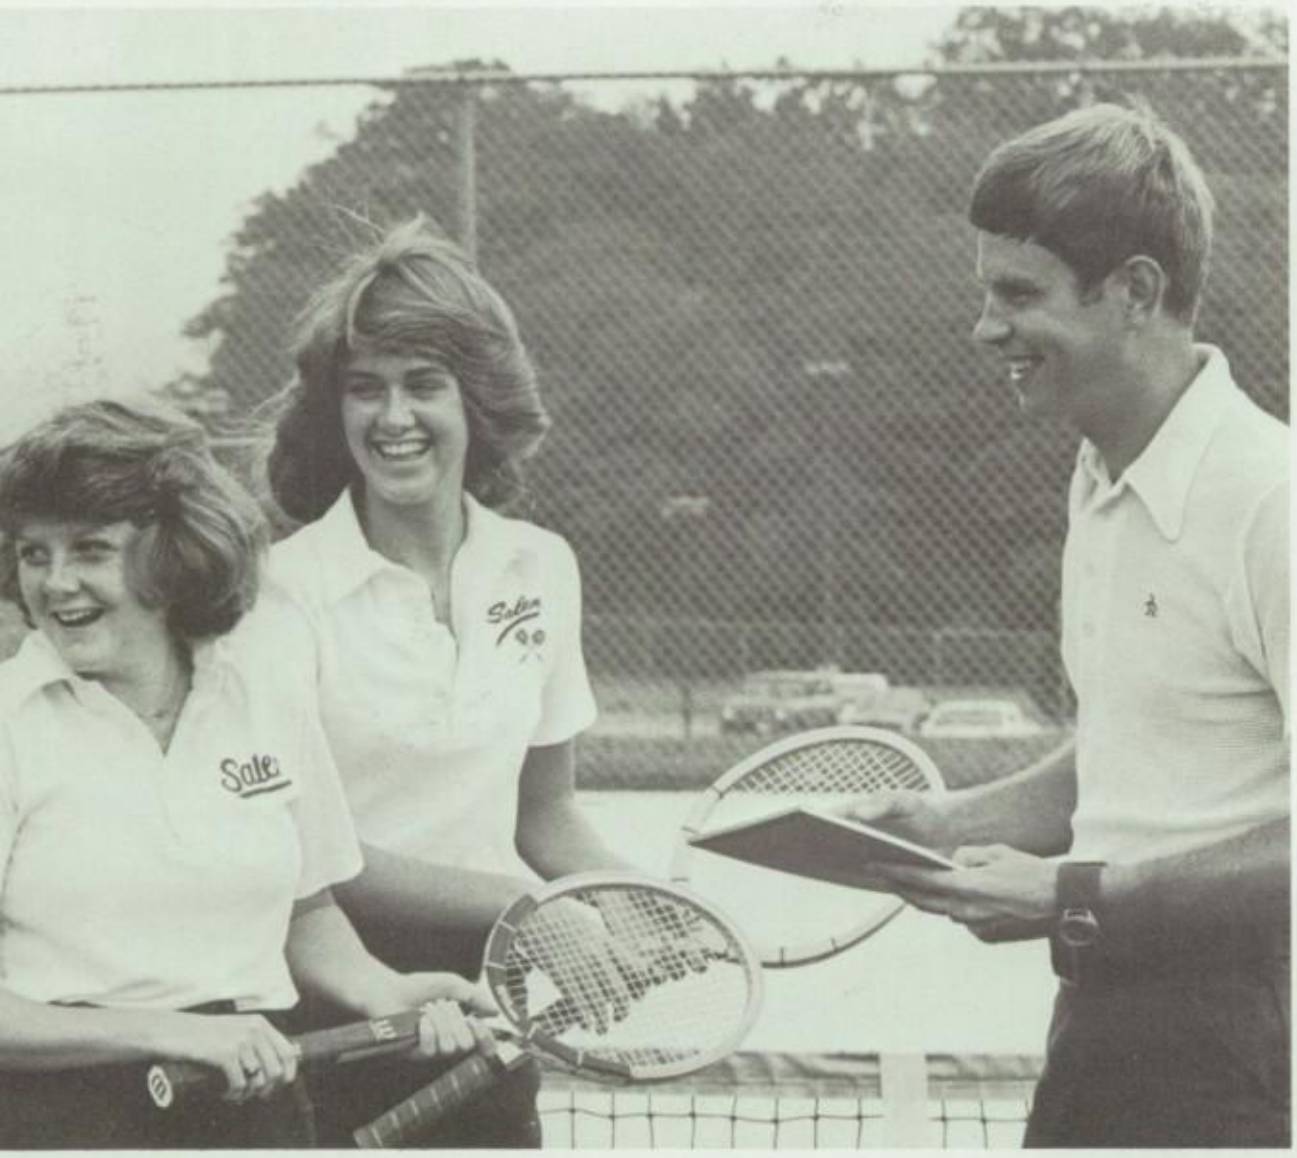
Talented tennis team excels



This year proved to be an excellent season for girls' tennis, and Mr. Dave Peterson, the coach was very pleased with the team. The team won the season title and took first place in the district tournament. During the regular season, the team was undefeated, compiling a 12-0 record. The team had its outstanding individual performers. Of the top six players on the team, four of the team members went undefeated during the regular season. During the district tournament, 59 out of the 60 singles matches played were won by the Salem High team. Also, the three starting doubles teams went undefeated in the tournament. During the regionals, the team won a victory over Gar-Field from the Commonwealth district. However, the team lost in a close match to Albemarle High School, ending a highly successful season.

Boys and girls are first in Metro

The boys' cross country team ended the season with a very impressive record. They placed second in the district and became the first AAA school to win the Metro. Much of their success was due to seniors Jeff Nowlin, Glenn Butcher, Tyree Nichols, John Scaggs, and captain Daryl Martin. Next year five experienced runners will return to the team: juniors, Glenn Roach, Robert Roach, Robert Ogden, Todd Altice, and sophomore, Richard Moore.

The girls, too, had a successful season. Although they lost meets to Cave Spring and William Byrd, they placed first in the Metro and District and sixth in the Regional meet.

Spartan team defies gravity

The 1981-'82 boys' basketball team caught quite a few eyes this season. Senior Curtis Taliaferro and freshman sensation Richard Morgan led the team in scoring while seniors Richard McCulley and Mike Jones led in rebounding. Point guard Evans Halstead displayed much leadership and junior Eric Pendleton proved to be a good man off the bench.

The Spartans tallied a 13-9 record with outstanding victories over Patrick Henry and Franklin County. Salem was fourth in the district during the regular season but lost in semifinals of the district tournament to William Fleming.

The Spartans' experience showed in many victories this year, although the Cinderella story was freshman Richard Morgan. In his first year of high school basketball, Morgan outscored 75% of the players in the district. Curtis Taliferro stayed in the scoring race in the district until late in the season when he droped to third.

Salem's own dynamic duo

Two players stood out this year for Salem High's basketball team. Surprisingly, one of Salem's stars was only a freshman at Andrew Lewis Junior High. Richard Morgan played guard, although numerous dunks were made by this sensational ninth grader. The other half of the devastating duo was Curtis Taliaferro, a member of last year's all-district squad and this season's scoring leader. Curtis, a senior, has great college potential. This duo brought Salem High from the cellar of the Roanoke District to a tournament contender this year.

J.V. team: stepping block to Varsity

The JV basketball team under the leadership of Coach Eddie Blankenship had a fairly good season. Brad Craig and Jay Jackson served as captains for the year. Jimmy Fielder was one of the outstanding players and the leading scorer. The JV's played right before the Varsity, and, even though the crowds were not always there, the JV's tried their best every game hoping in future seasons to make the Varsity team.

Wrestlers finish season 13-2

This year Salem High School's wrestling team finished its season with a very impressive 13-2 record. The only losses came in close matches with Pulaski and Franklin County, teams later defeated in regional competition. Although Fleming won the District, Salem defeated them by 8 points 30-22.

This year three members went to the state competition: Tony Dillon, who placed first in regionals and second in district; Jimmy Bean, who placed second in regionals and first in district, and Robert Houchens, who placed fourth in regionals and first in district.

Salem will lose three seniors this year. They are Tony Dillon, Troy Etter, and Tim Wade. Juniors on the team are Allen Laprad, Terry Mills, Donnie Shelton, Jimmy Bean, E.B. THE SPIRIT OF '82

REPERTOIRE

"By my senior year, I was nearly crazy with the responsibilities."

Those early weeks of my first year at Salem were filled with so many decisions that I thought were important. On the first club day, I was torn between the Bi Phy Chem Club and the Latin Club. Later, I gave up trying to choose and joined both, though I had been warned about getting involved in too much and doing nothing very well. By my senior year I was nearly crazy with the responsibilities I had incurred as a result of my determination not to pass up any worthwhile experience Salem had to offer. I had no one to blame but myself, but I spent a lot of time complaining about being "dumped on." I was beginning to grasp that being the typical, spirited student required much more than surface activity and that being responsibly involved demanded a great deal of my free time. As the year inched toward June, however, thoughts that my time at Salem would soon end mitagated the heavy responsibilities. I watched with relief and some amusement as juniors captured long sought student offices. I was smug. We seniors knew what they were getting themselves into! Combined, though, with the relief I felt was the satisfaction that I had truly given Salem my best shot and, in turn, Salem had given me confidence in myself, the ability to budget my time, and most important of all, a sense of priorities. I knew, too, that I was a link in a chain that comprised the traditions of Salem and that the spirit of '82 was crucial in joining past achievements to future hopes.

NHS promotes high standards

The Salem High School chapter of the National Honor Society began the school year with one aim in mind: to promote service, leadership, character, and scholarship among the student body.

Soon after the opening of school, several members of the society served as guides during Back-to-School-Night. Also, in September, seniors were given the opportunity to apply for membership in the NHS. Five senior girls were inducted during the fall ceremony. Following the induction service, the members of the NHS began to make preparations for the annual faculty Christmas tea scheduled for December 2, 1981. The tea was held in the school cafeteria and was hosted by the Honor Society members. This tea gave the students and faculty a chance to get to know one another better and enjoy tasty appetizers.

Throughout the school year, the members, along with club sponsors, Mrs. Dreama Menefee and Mrs. Carolyn Newell, worked diligently to maintain and encourage the four qualities of the NHS. Sophomore and junior inductions were held in the spring.

NHS Officers: Harriet Kolmer, coresponding secretary; Sylvia Martin, treasurer; April Jordon, recording secretary; Chanda Braxton, president.

Some deadlines seemed impossible

Work on the 1982 Laconian began during the first couple of weeks of school. Few experienced workers returned to work on the staff; however, the new members put forth every effort to learn the many techniques involved in compiling a resourceful yearbook.

The staffers learned how to crop pictures, write copy, and design pages. They spent endless hours employing these techniques, as well as searching for information and organizing the material. The new members soon became acquainted with hectic deadlines. Occasionally as many as fifty-six pages were due at the publishing company within a two week period. Staffers often found themselves taking work home in order to meet the approaching deadlines. Within a short time, the inexperience of the staffers was converted into skillful publication ability.

After months of hard work, the Laconian staff members rested as they eagerly waited to review their finished product.

The Oracle staff was financially independent this year. One way the Oracle met its budget was by taking the newspaper to the junior high school and selling it to the students there.

The Oracle offered a wide variety of articles, including articles on sports and special features such as the student of the week.

Diverse activities please members

The DECA Club was involved in many activities this year. One of the club's community projects was collecting food baskets for the needy at Christmas. On September 30, the officers participated in the officers' training conference at First National Exchange Bank. Dana Francisco, club president was elected district vice-president.

The Salem Chapter of DECA received first place in the district at the Fall Rally held on October 14 at William Byrd High School. Students competed in such events as egg tosses and races. In April, the state Leadership Conference was held in Norfolk. Student representatives were chosen to compete in various areas, such as job interviewing and sales demonstration. Also, students could compete for a $200 scholarship awarded to the outstanding student in DE II or DE III.

Through the many activities of DECA, Salem students were prepared to enter the business world with a better understanding of what would be expected of them.

Plus members look to the future

A handful of students at Salem High School this year dedicated much of their free time to helping younger students. These students were members of Plus, a service organization.

Plus is an additional resource for the elementary guidance program. Its prupose is to aid students in the elementary school in the development of independent, self supporting attitudes with emphasis on communicating, decision making, and personal, social, and academic awareness through the efforts of trained high school leaders.

Plus members participated in approximately eight hours of training with the elementary and high school counselors. The students served eleven elementary classrooms in the following schools: G.W. Carver, Glenvar, West Salem, and South Salem. The organization was sponsored by Mrs. Jane Alger.

Daniel Richardson and Margaret Gregory discuss plans for their next session with the PLUS group.

Salem FBLA rates as honor chapter

FBLA Officers: Cathy Russell, secretary; Sharon Comer, president; Wesley Lutz, reporter; Cindy Jarvis, historian; Angie Smith, vice-president; Ronnie Crouch, treasurer; Carolyn Link, parliamentarian.

The Future Business Leaders of America operates on a five-point program. This requirement is necessary to become an honor chapter, which the Salem High School FBLA has been for several years.

Mrs. Graves is head sponsor, along with six other business teachers who work closely with the officers. The five points include school, community, leadership and skills, financial and promotional activities. This year's school activities included supporting Vocational Education Week and preparing Thanksgiving baskets for the needy. The FBLA financial activities for this year were selling cheese and spirit towels.

To promote the club a booth for students to visit on Club Day was set up in the lobby. This year the FBLA also planned an overnight trip to Washington. Participating in FBLA was encouraged through the business classes, and students received points for the activities in which they participated.

Exchange student program a success

Last year Salem's American Field Services Club was to make plans so that Salem could have a foreign exchange student this year. Their plans came true. This year Salem High School had two foreign exchange students, Chiara Barbieri from Italy and Melba Sangria from Mexico. These two girls became close firends. They both enjoyed the opportunity to be able to visit the United States, and they were both very friendly and enthusiastic about Salem High.

Club members participated in activities with other American Field Service Clubs in the valley, and, in this way, were able to talk with the foreign exchange students sponsored by other school groups. Also, the AFS Club participated in fund-raising activities so that they could plan for other foreign exchange students for next year.

Red Cross members seek donors

The Salem High School Red Cross Club had a very active year with the aid of their sponsor, Mrs. Barbara Kyle. The twenty-one members worked in cooperation with the Red Cross Chapter of the Roanoke Valley. One of their main projects this year was sponsoring the bloodmobile at Salem High in April.

The club also participated in many helpful activities throughout the Roanoke Valley. In December each member called about thirty former donors for the bloodmobile at Salem Presbyterian Church. They also made Christmas gifts and took them to the Lewis Gale pediatrics department. In January there was a lecture with the Life-Saving Crew to demonstrate CPR techniques and to help members understand the ways in which the Crew works. In February each member had his blood typed. This gave the students a chance to experience the satisfaction of donating blood.

Mrs. Beverly Sellers seems ready to resume her duties after giving blood when the Red Cross visited Salem High School for donations.

Service is by-word of Salem S.C.A.

The executive cabinet of the S.C.A. met during seventh period every day during the school year to plan activities that would benefit all Salem High School students. The executive cabinet consisted of the S.C.A. officers and the presidents and vice-presidents of the senior and junior classes.

The S.C.A., under the sponsorship of Mr. Robert Wright, is mainly a service organization, helping with major school activities. The morning and afternoon announcements were done by S.C.A. officers, and the Homecoming parade was planned by the S.C.A. Also, a survey was conducted to get students' ideas on improving the school lunch program, and the S.C.A. helped with the school evaluation. In addition, during December the S.C.A. held a homeroom door-decorating contest, a club ornament contest, and a mail exchange. The S.C.A. also helped with the Chorale Christmas concert and was responsible for the school's Christmas tree.

The S.C.A. was concerned with planning projects that would benefit all students. Grady Speigel and Catherine Chapman, president and vice-president, attended S.C.A. camp at Ferrum College during the summer to get new ideas for the school year.

Pep Club catches the spirit of '82

The 1981-1982 school year entailed much for members of the Pep Club. Posters were sold in the fall to raise money for club projects. Homecoming was also a big event for the club. They participated in Homecoming week by decorating the gym for the assembly and holding nominations and elections of the King and Prince.

Throughout the year, members worked hard to plan activities for the various teams. A spring banquet was the final activity for the year. The club's attempt to promote school spirit was greatly appreciated among the students and faculty of Salem High School. Assistant principal, Ms. Sandra Hadaway sponsored the Pep Club.

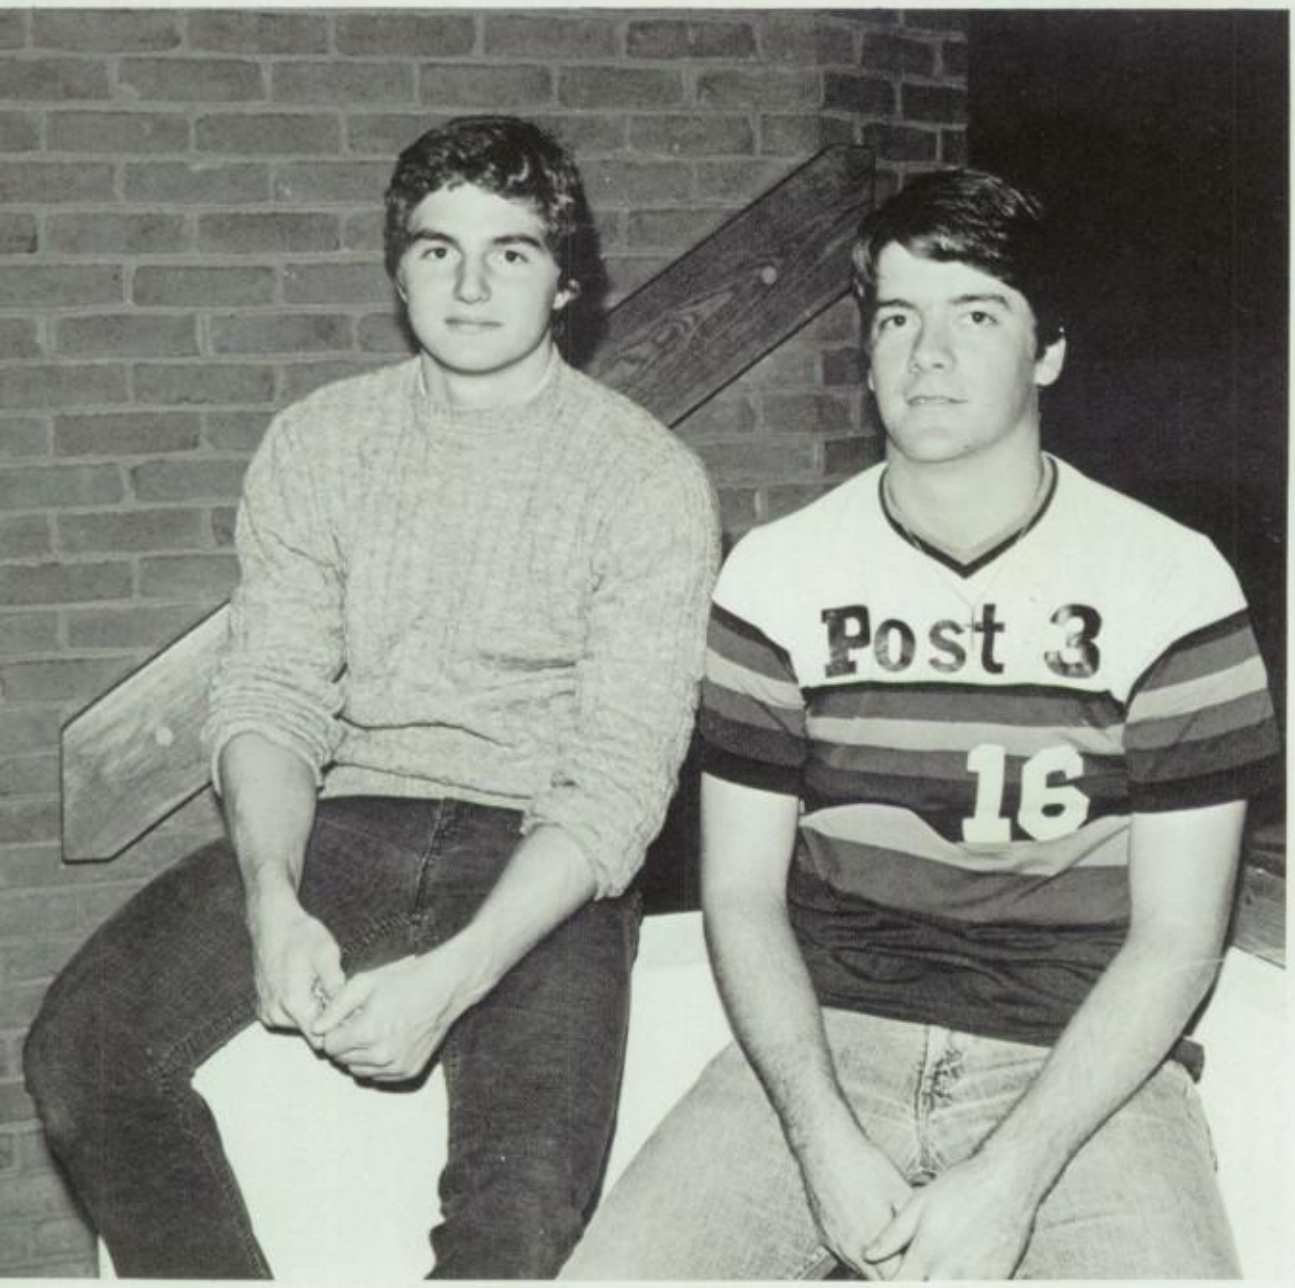
Club seeks active sports participation



The Monogram Club this year consisted of members of the student body who earned a varsity letter in any school sport. Student body participation in school athletics was the club's main promotion.

Projects included sponsoring the Homecoming Court. Nominations and elections were held for the girls on the court. The club tried to have at least one outing a year, such as a ski trip or a trip to an amusement park. As in past years, the Monogram Club was sponsored by Mr. Walter Braine.

Monogram Officers: David Hamlett, treasurer and Chuck Johnston, president.

Matching their wits with experts

The Strategy and Tactics Club was a new version of the old Chess Club. The club was formed during the school year last year but did not become really active until the beginning of this year. It attracted a small but elite group of students who enjoyed pitting their wits against one another.

The group, consisting of all boys, spend Wednesday club periods playing chess and other games such as the popular Dungeons and Dragons. Under the sponsorship of Mr. Don Tillman members improved their skills at these games.

The Art Club this year, under the direction of Mr. John Bullock, took on several projects to help develop an appreciation for art.

Some of the projects were to make new banners for the library and to repaint the Spartan sign.

The Industrial Arts Club also had several projects to undertake, such as making pen holders for the visiting committee, who observed and critiqued Salem High School the week of November 9-13.

Mr. Robert Wright, Mr. Welford Penn, and Mr. Clinton Scudder, sponsors of the club all helped to make the year both fun and educational.

Convention highlights Latin activities

The weekend of November 13-14 highlighted the year for many Latin students. On Friday, November 13, Latin students left early in the morning to arrive in Norfolk for the start of the 1981-82 State Latin Convention. Participants were treated to a banquet and dance that night. Some students signed up to take tests which allowed them to compete with other students from all over Virginia in Vocabulary, Roman Mythology, and grammar. The convention concluded with a general assembly meeting and lunch on Saturday.

During the year many members participated in plays, curtamen contests, and the third annual Mr. Rome Contest. Chiara Barbier an exchange student from Italy, was a student in Latin Prose and also a club member. Chiara spent one club meeting answering other students' questions about Rome and Italy.

In addition to these many activities, the club had a fall picnic, Christmas party, and spring banquet.

Spanish Club Officers: Eva Deyerle, historian; Mariade Guzman, secretary; Sandra Craig, historian; Margaret Gregory, president; Katherine Walker, treasurer; Faith Quesenberry, vice-president.

This year the Spanish Club consisted of sixty-five members. With Mrs. Judith Dickerson and Mrs. Lynn Lynch as sponsors of the club, the group stayed busy throughout the year. The club decorated a hall for Homecoming Week. The club also had a Christmas party with the other foreign language clubs. Halloween was celebrated with a Day of the Dead party. In addition, speakers came from Roanoke College to speak at the club meetings. The annual trip to Fiesta Cantina was held again this year, and the picnic at Mowles Spring Park ended an active year.

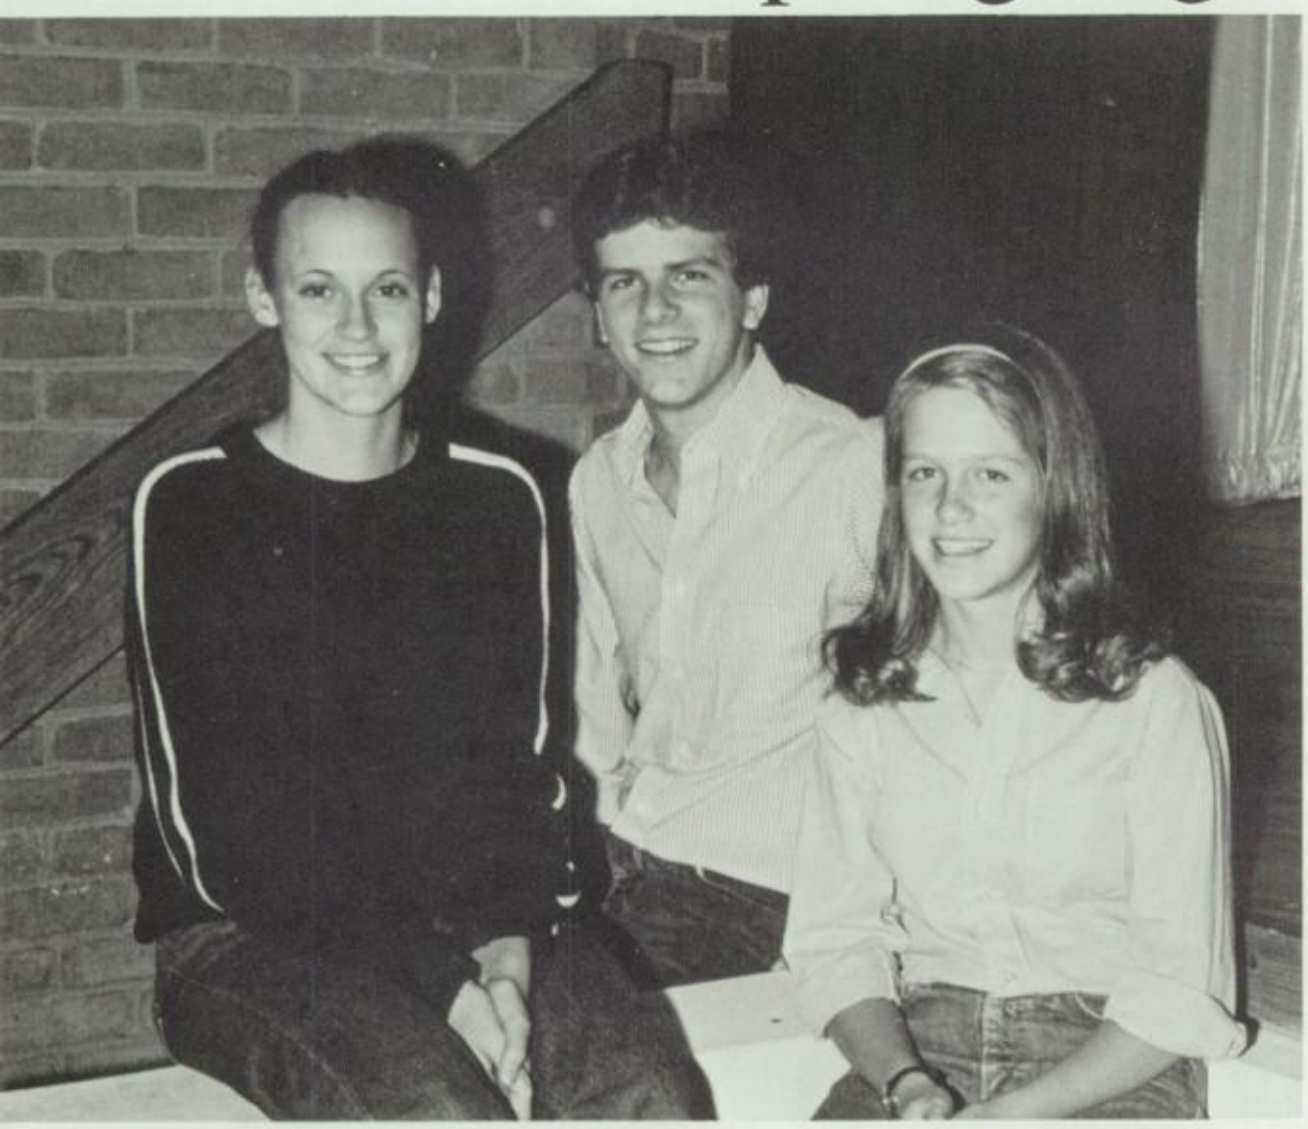
La Maison trip highlights year



FrenchClub Officers: Debbie Parker, secretary; C.J. Michaels, treasurer; Kim Viars, historian.

The French Club was in full swing this year with many fun-filled activities. The club held a picnic at Longwood Park. The group also celebrated Christmas with a party which consisted of pot-luck dinner. Following the dinner, club members went Christmas caroling in their neighborhoods. One of the highlights of the year was the dinner outing to the La Maison restaurant. At the end of the year, the French Club had a Mardi Gras celebration, dressing in unique and often amusing costumes. Because of the participation of so many members and the guidance and direction of sponsors, Mrs. Dickerson and Mrs. Diane Ellis, the club enjoyed another productive year.

Members develop science skills

The Bi Phy Chem Club at Salem High School interested many science students. Physics, chemistry, biology, and anatomy students participated in the club. The Bi-Phy-Chem Club took a trip to the Smithsonian Institute in Washington D.C. in the spring and was involved in the annual science fair.

This year students listened to many speakers from science-related fields. Both high school students and university students spoke to the club during the year.

The club's purposes were to increase students' knowledge of science, to learn, to perfect skills in science, and to understand the importance of science in everyday life.

FHA hosts back-to-school night

The Future Homemakers of America participated in many activities this year. They hosted the PTA Back-to-School-Night in the fall. Sponsor Mrs. Evelyn Blake and the officers scheduled other activities which included, preparing an old fashioned Thanksgiving dinner during the school day.

Also, the group visited a retirement community and read to the elderly people for walks. In January the club had a skating party to celebrate the end of exams. Finally, to close out the year members enjoyed a day of fun at Busch Gardens. In order to make money for these activities, the club sold candles and stationery. President Sherri Corvin served as an officer in the federation, which is made up of clubs from seven counties.

Keyettes were as diligent as ever

Keyettes is a service club whose main purpose was to help the community and the school. At Halloween, club members visited Lewis Gale's children's ward and took bags of candy to the children. The Keyettes made food baskets at Thanksgiving and Christmas for a needy family. For Valentines Day they made valentines for people at McVitty House. At Easter the Keyettes made baskets for the children at the Baptist Home.

All these activities were accomplished with the help and guidance of three sponsors: Mrs. Vicki Williams, Ms. Nancy Robinson, and Mrs. Leslie Ottevaere. The secret pal program was one of the dominating features of the Keyttes. Before holidays and on particular days, such as birthdays and Homecoming, the lockers of a Keyette member's secret pal would be attractively decorated with wrapping paper, and the inside would be filled with assorted presents and candy. In December the Keyettes held their induction, and the present members gave a tea for the new members.

Key Club, Kiwanis work together

The Key Club is a service club sponsored by the Kiwanis. The group seeks to help people in the community. The club is sponsored by Mr. John Hall and Mr. Fred King. The Key Club sponsored the Homecoming dance and helped to make Thanksgiving and Christmas a happy time of year for the needy. Most of the members attended the Kiwanis meetings and worked hand in hand with Kiwanis Club on some projects.

Key Club Officers: Danny Hart, president; Mike Giessler, vice-president; Jimmy Galbraith, secretary.

FCA members offered challenge

The FCA was formed so that Christian athletes and their coaches could join and follow Christ. The students were able to participate in many activities and fund raisers. One of the fund raisers this year was the second annual Chance Crawford Basketball Marathon. Also, breakfasts were held monthly with the other members of the Virginia Western Chapter of the FCA. The FCA was also responsible for the Baccalaureate service that was given in honor of the 1981-82 graduating class.

With the guidance of sponsor Mr. Ray Moore the group maintained an open membership policy and worked together to establish and maintain a Christian attitude in all phases of athletic endeavor.

FCA Officers: Bobby Pickle, treasurer; Marnie Bolt, secretary: Debbie Williams, president; Jody Sease, vice-president.

Small A-V group fills many needs

The Audio-Visual Club boasted a larger membership this year. One of the major accomplishments of the club was the training of members to operate audio-visual equipment and assist teachers in the classroom. The members also served as intermediaries between the professional staff in the library and the student body.

Activities for the club included decorating the library for Christmas. Again this year, Mrs. Elinor Graham, head librarian sponsored the club. Under her direction, the group helped distribute equipment to classrooms, assisted in simple repairs, and when they were available, operated the equipment for classroom instruction and occassionally helped clubs and organizations set up for meetings in which A-V equipment was required.

A-V Club Officers: Dawn Van Hoy, secretary; Steve Lacey, vice-president; Alan Gentry, president.

THE SPIRIT OF '82

REINFORCEMENT

"By the end of the second week I had sold ads totaling $500."

The first year I worked on Salem's yearbook I was a lowly sophomore and was absolutely intimidated when at the first staff meeting, held in midsummer before anyone had even thought of returning to school, the business manager said we all had to sell $150 worth of ads. The penalty for failing to come through was to be removed from the staff. I was given a list of businesses to contact, and I was sure I would be summarily and routinely dismissed as soon as I put my foot in the door. After all, I was only a kid, and businessmen didn't have time to be concerned about a high school yearbook.

How wrong I was! Most businesses I contacted were actually glad to see me, and, more importantly, eager to support Salem High School. Before the first week of the ad campaign was over, I had sold my quota. By the end of the next week, I had sold over $500 worth of ads, and my position on the annual staff was more than secure! At the time, I was merely relieved that one more chore was behind me. Later I began to appreciate what this kind of support meant, and once again I realized what true spirit involved.

Many advertisers, I knew, were parents of students, and, therefore, had a personal interest in supporting the school. These people and the others, too, purchased ads because they were committed to a better community and realized that one of a community's most valuable assests is its young people. I recognized that they looked beyond the present to the future. Through their cooperation, we gained experience in running our own small business and, more significantly, confidence in our own abilities. Because of such strong support, the students at Salem were better prepared to face the challenges and opportunities of the future.

Many students, like Mike Tyler, fought inflation by obtaining part time jobs with local merchants.

Once Every Week
For Over 125 Years

We've been telling the same story for more than 125 years now, and for the past four years, a lot of it has centered around Salem High School. We let the entire valley know what's going on in school organizations, upcoming activities, and special student events.

And when it comes to sports, nobody spotlights Salem High like your hometown newspaper . . . from the first kick-off to the last overtime and everything in between.

We congratulate The Class of '82 and look forward to its continued readership.

THE SPIRIT OF '82

RETROSPECT

"It was a year filled with great times and devastating moments."

For three years I gazed in disbelief at the excitement — with which alumni of Salem High School returned. I had promised myself long ago that once I had graduated I would never come back. But as graduation approached, I mellowed. For years I'd been told that these were the best times of my life. All I could think was "You mean it gets worse"? In retrospect, I can see the school year of 1981-82 in better perspective.

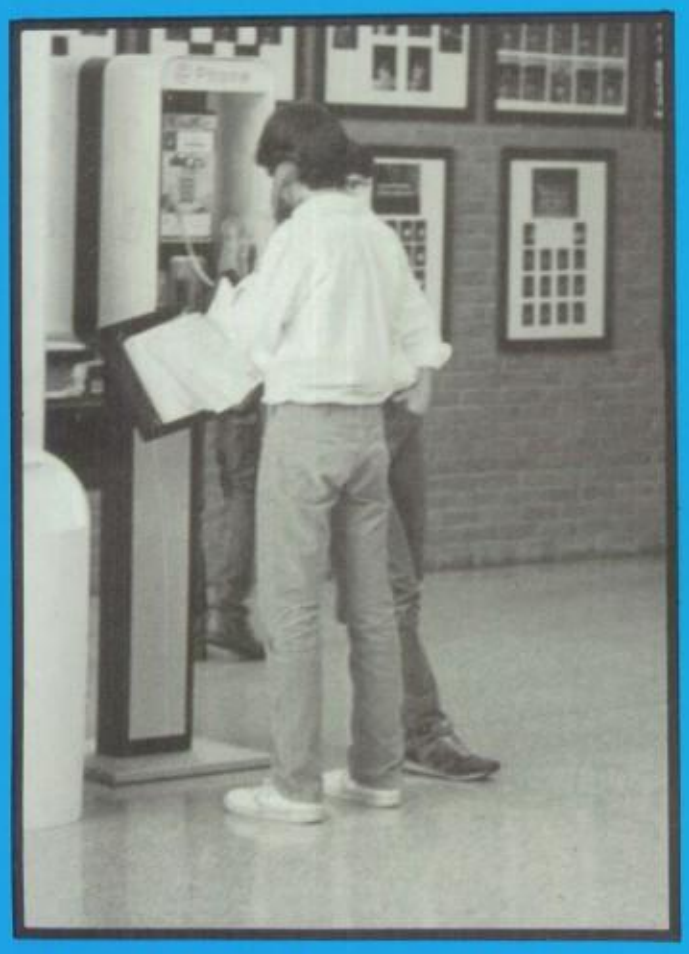
It was a year filled with excitement and new fads and scarred with several tragedies. Movies such as Endless Love and Halloween Two were box office smashes. Rick Springfield, Sheana Eston, Darryl Hall, and John Oates — all hit the top 40 several times. Hundreds of students flocked to the concerts of Barry Manilow, the Rolling Stones, and Alabama. Controversial issues — gun control, ERA, and nuclear power — sometimes entered student life through classroom debates. Also, the attempted assassination of Pope John II, the death of Anwar Sadat, the Poland crisis, and the death of Natalie Wood struck many with disbelief and not a little apprehension.

The year 1981-82 had its share of great times as well as some devestatingly low moments. And as the time came to leave Salem and a major chapter in my life behind, I realized that both the good and the bad times had shaped my atititudes and had been crucial in shaping the Spirit of '82. H.K.

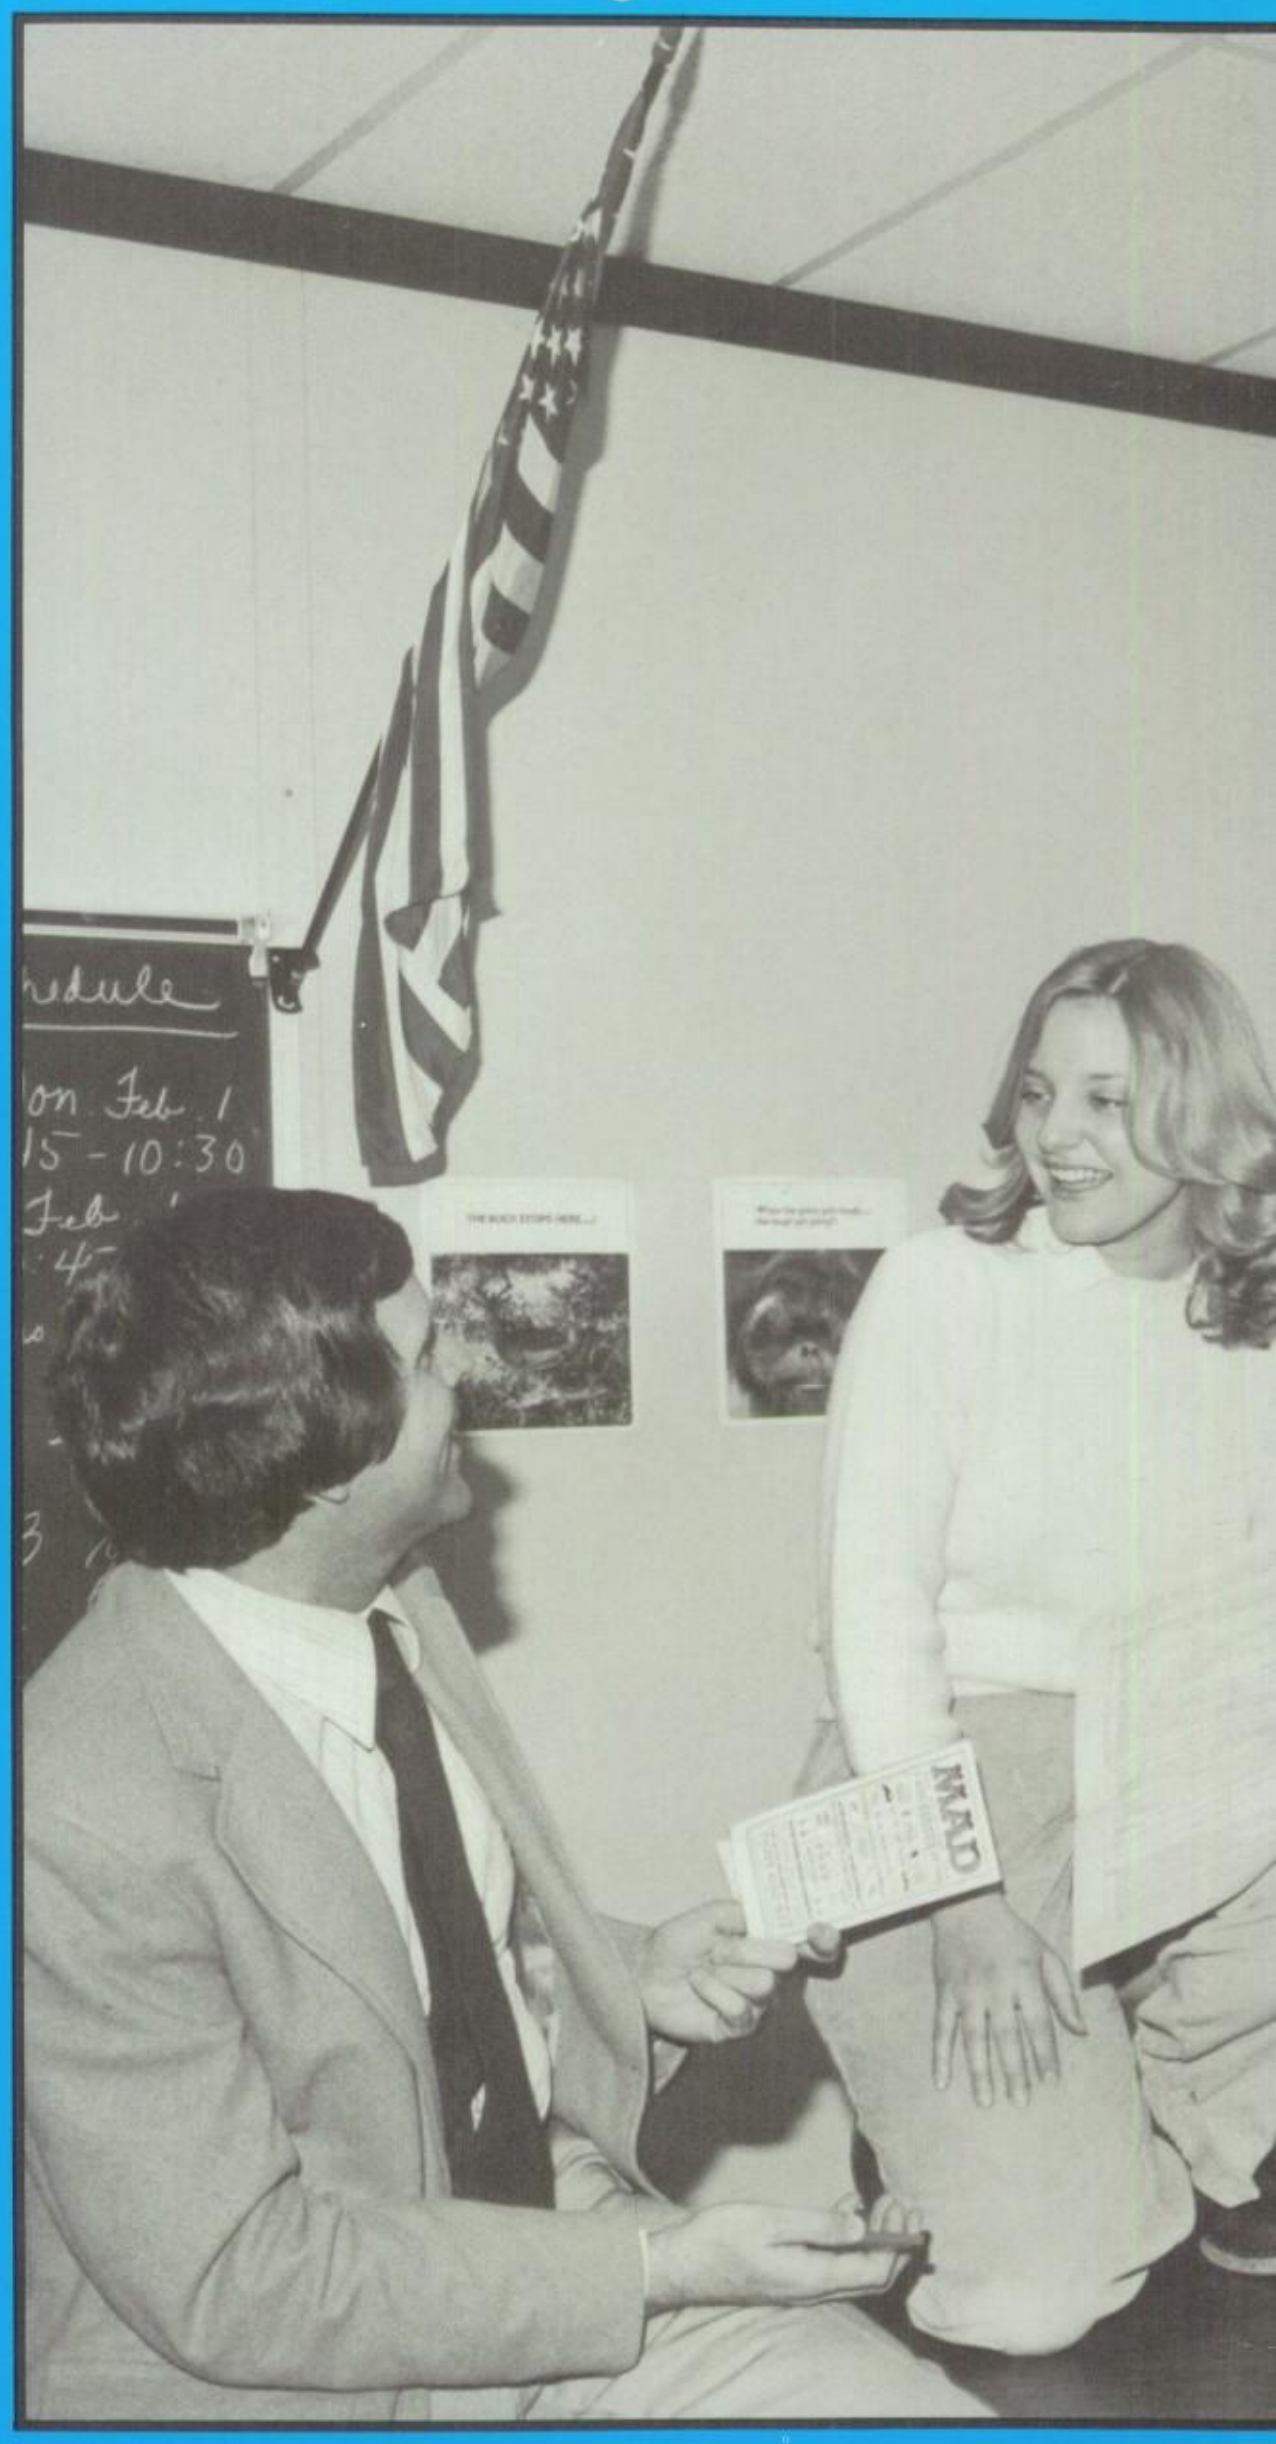
As June approached the familiar view from Salem's lobby window caused many seniors to reflect on their high school years.

"The years were a collection of images"

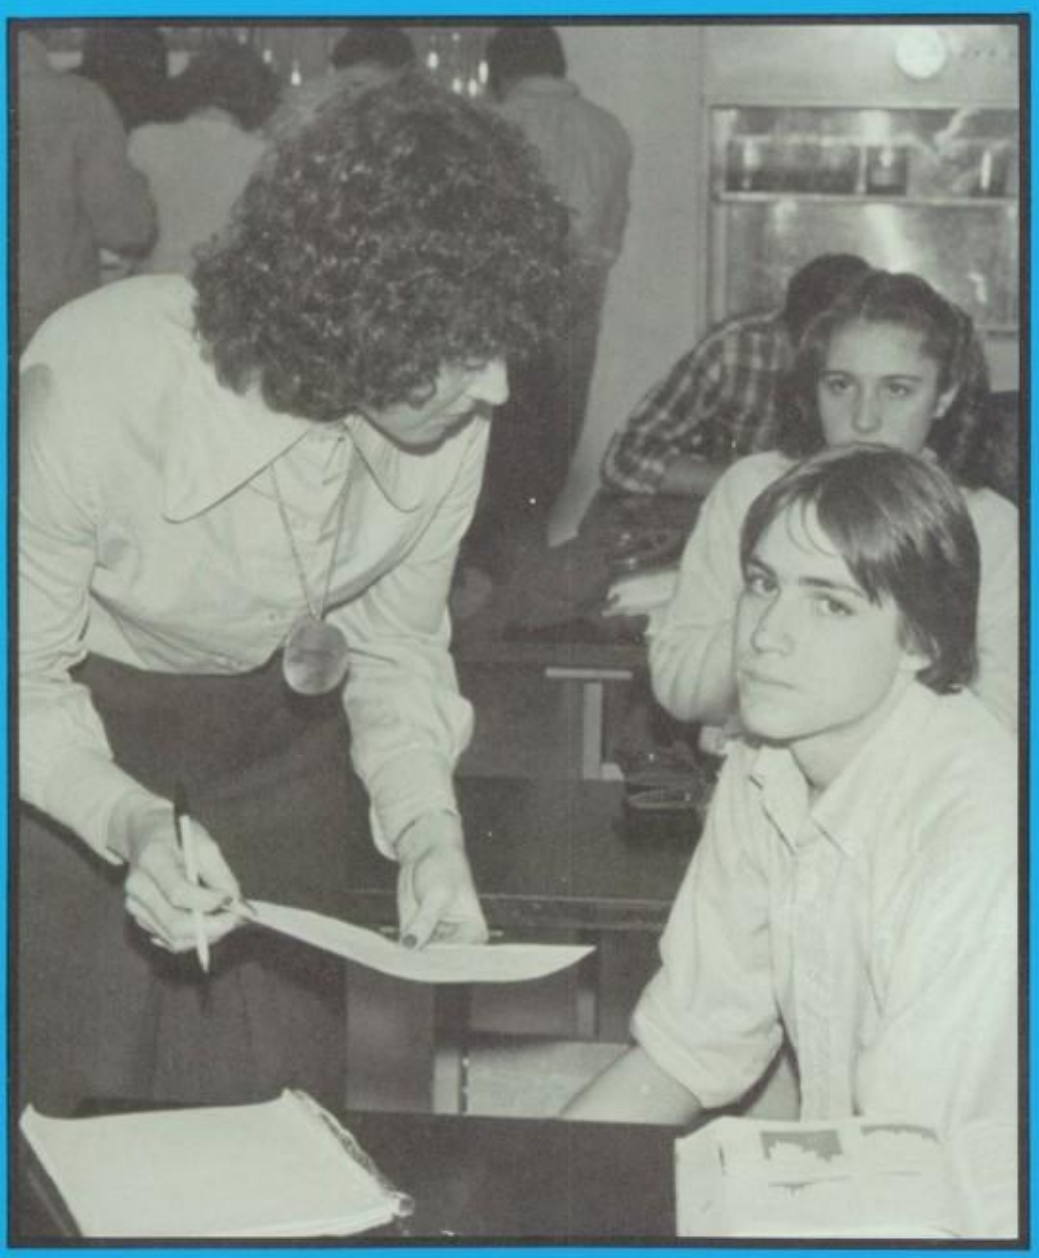
Suddenly the time to leave was upon me. The years seemed a collection of separate images: the classwork, the friends, the Friday nights that were sometimes unexpectedly terrific and other ones that didn't live up to what I hoped, the certain teachers who because of their sense of humor made the day bearable, the tests passed and the tests failed, and the ambitions that were realized and those that still remained aspirations. These times and others rushed through my mind with increasing frequency as the exit from Salem began.



Sometimes the most important part of the day was making arrangements for Friday night.



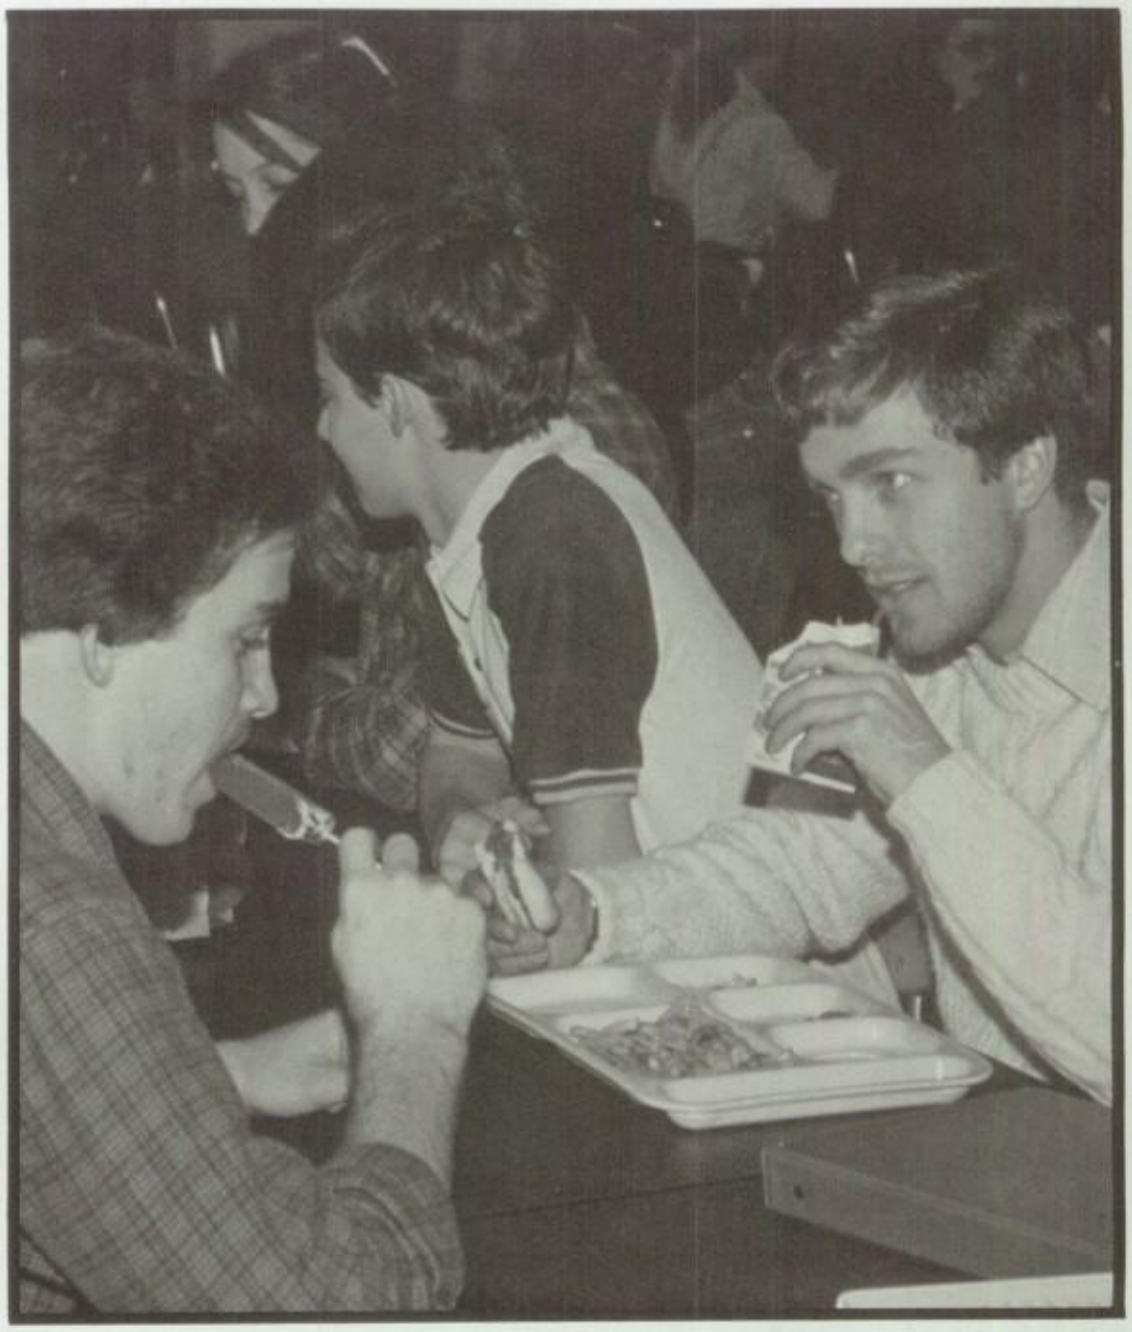
Mr. Robinson displays a most unusual sense of humor as he insists that Harriet Kolmer act out a scene to present to the class.



Alex Havenner seeks advice from Mrs. Jamison as to how he can best improve his science project.

Lisa Lambert checks an assignment date with a friend.

Seniors experienced a new sense of class unity as they worked together to put together their prize winning float.

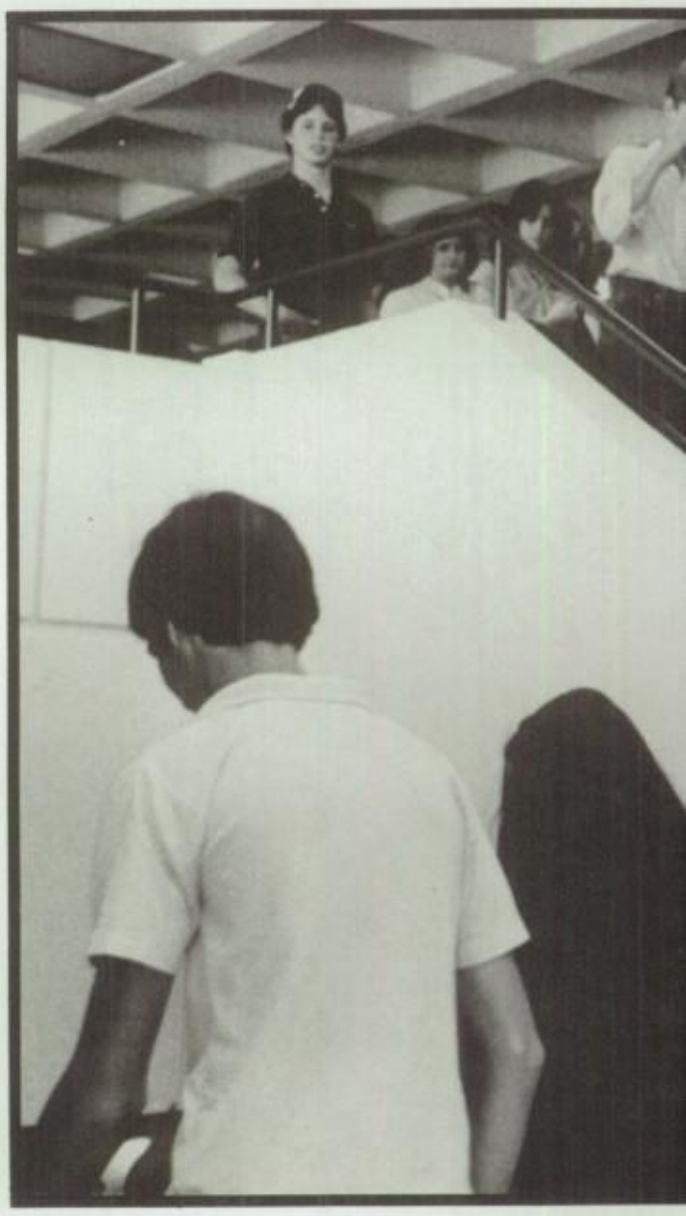


Barry Beckner and Bill Craig use their lunch break to catch up on the latest happenings.

An inevitable and predictable part of every day was some clowning in the halls, exhibited here by Mark Thomas, Richard Franklin, and Scott Richmond.

Vo-Tech students find satisfaction in learning the rudiments of several trades.

Steve Lacey can't risist the chance to entertain his journalism class.



"I was excited, yet afraid to leave Salem"

I suppose that almost any change one is faced with elicits mixed feelings. I was excited by the prospect of a new life next year, but at the same time afraid — afraid to leave the secure routine, even the predictable craziness of my classmates, that had become so much a part of my life. Part of me envied those who would return to all I had grown to appreciate over the years. I kept thinking as we ordered invitations, had transcripts mailed, were measured for caps and gowns, practiced for graduation, and proceeded through the countless other routines that were part of the end of the year that my particular class would never be together again. Both reluctantly and resolutely, I put these thoughts behind me and looked to the future.

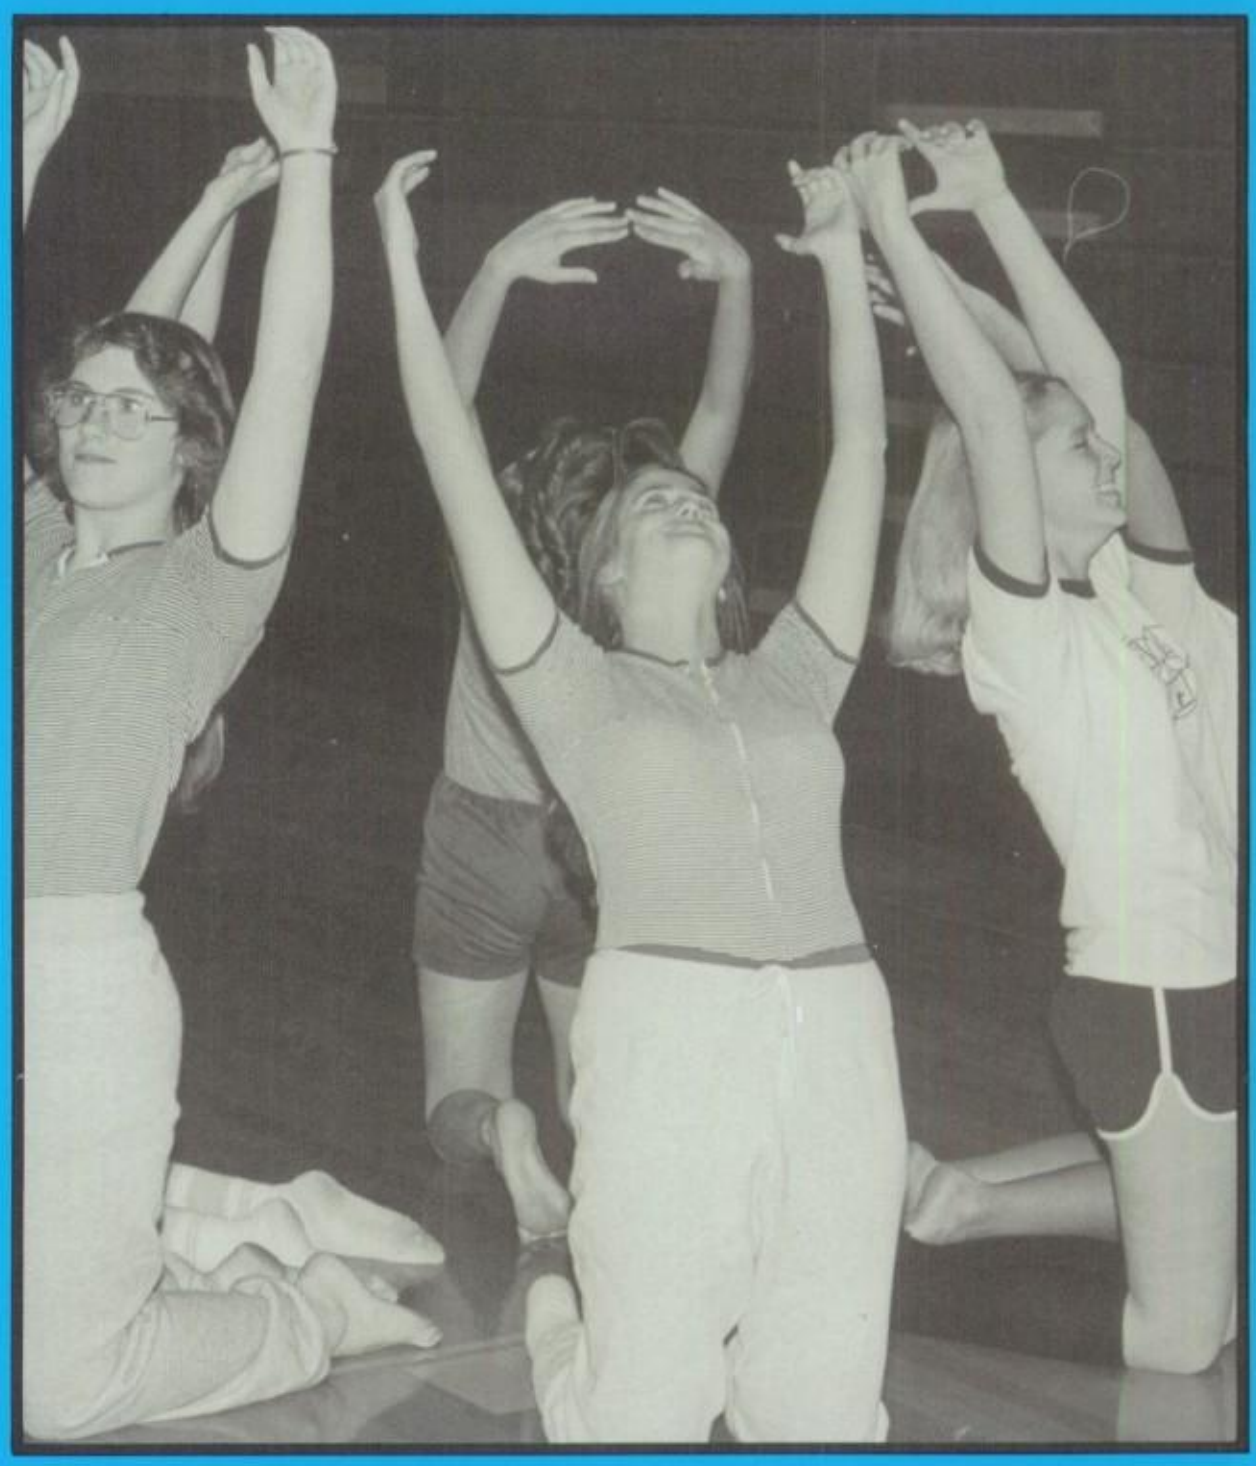
Mike Wills and Deleanna Russell listen carefully as Ms. Hadaway explains Salem's newest bell schedule.

Sharon Comer and Grady Spiegel consult on an up coming program for Plus students.

Sophomores quickly adjusted to the routine at Salem High School.

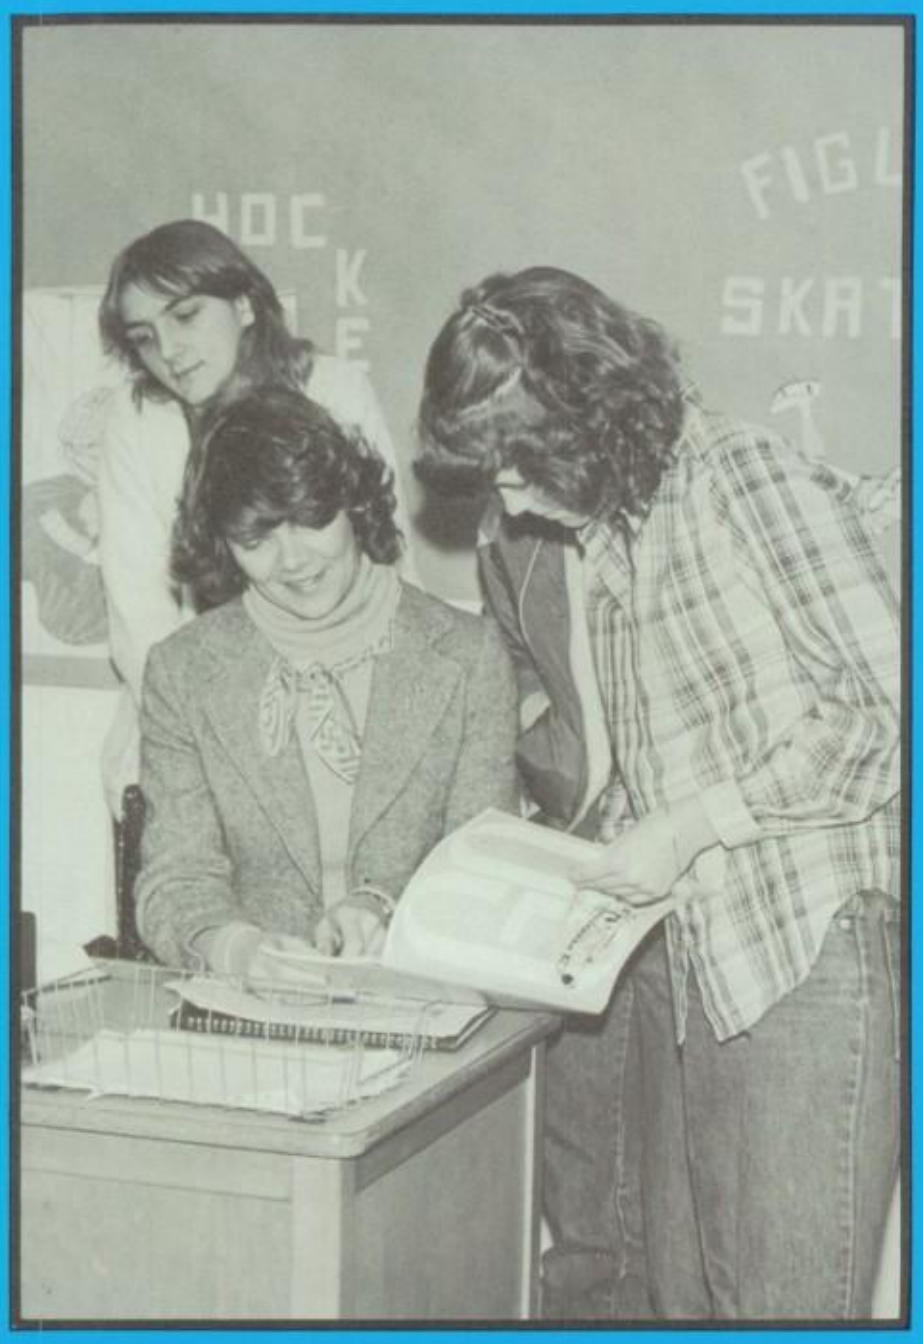
"Next year would be another chance for us"

For most students, next year would be another chance to improve their grades, become involved in sports and other activities, form deeper friendships with old acquaintances. For me and over 400 others, it would hold new faces, new places, new challenges. The prospect of jobs and careers was imminent for many of us; others of us planned to continue our formal education. All of us knew that our new lives would demand more and that attaining excellence and recognition for our efforts would be more difficult. Next year, for all of us, would indeed be another chance to realize dreams.



Though Salem played many hard fought games, disappointing losses made them look to next year for a more rewarding season.

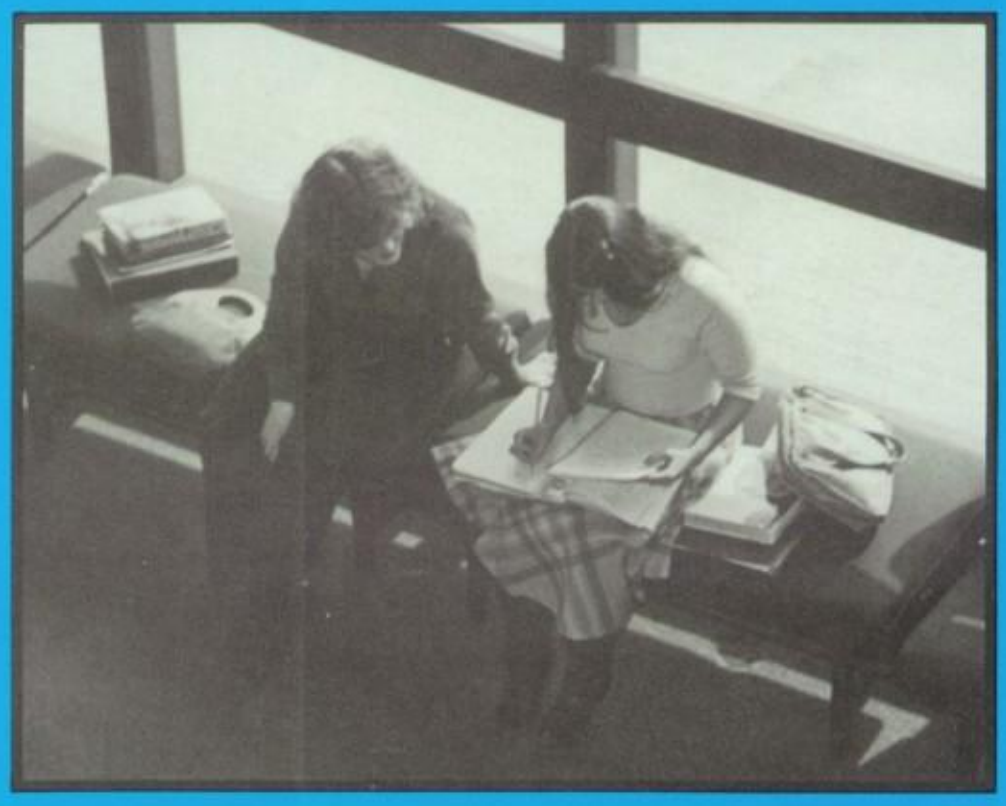
Modern dance students Sonya Slusher and Jill Deagan seek self-expression and gain poise through their efforts.

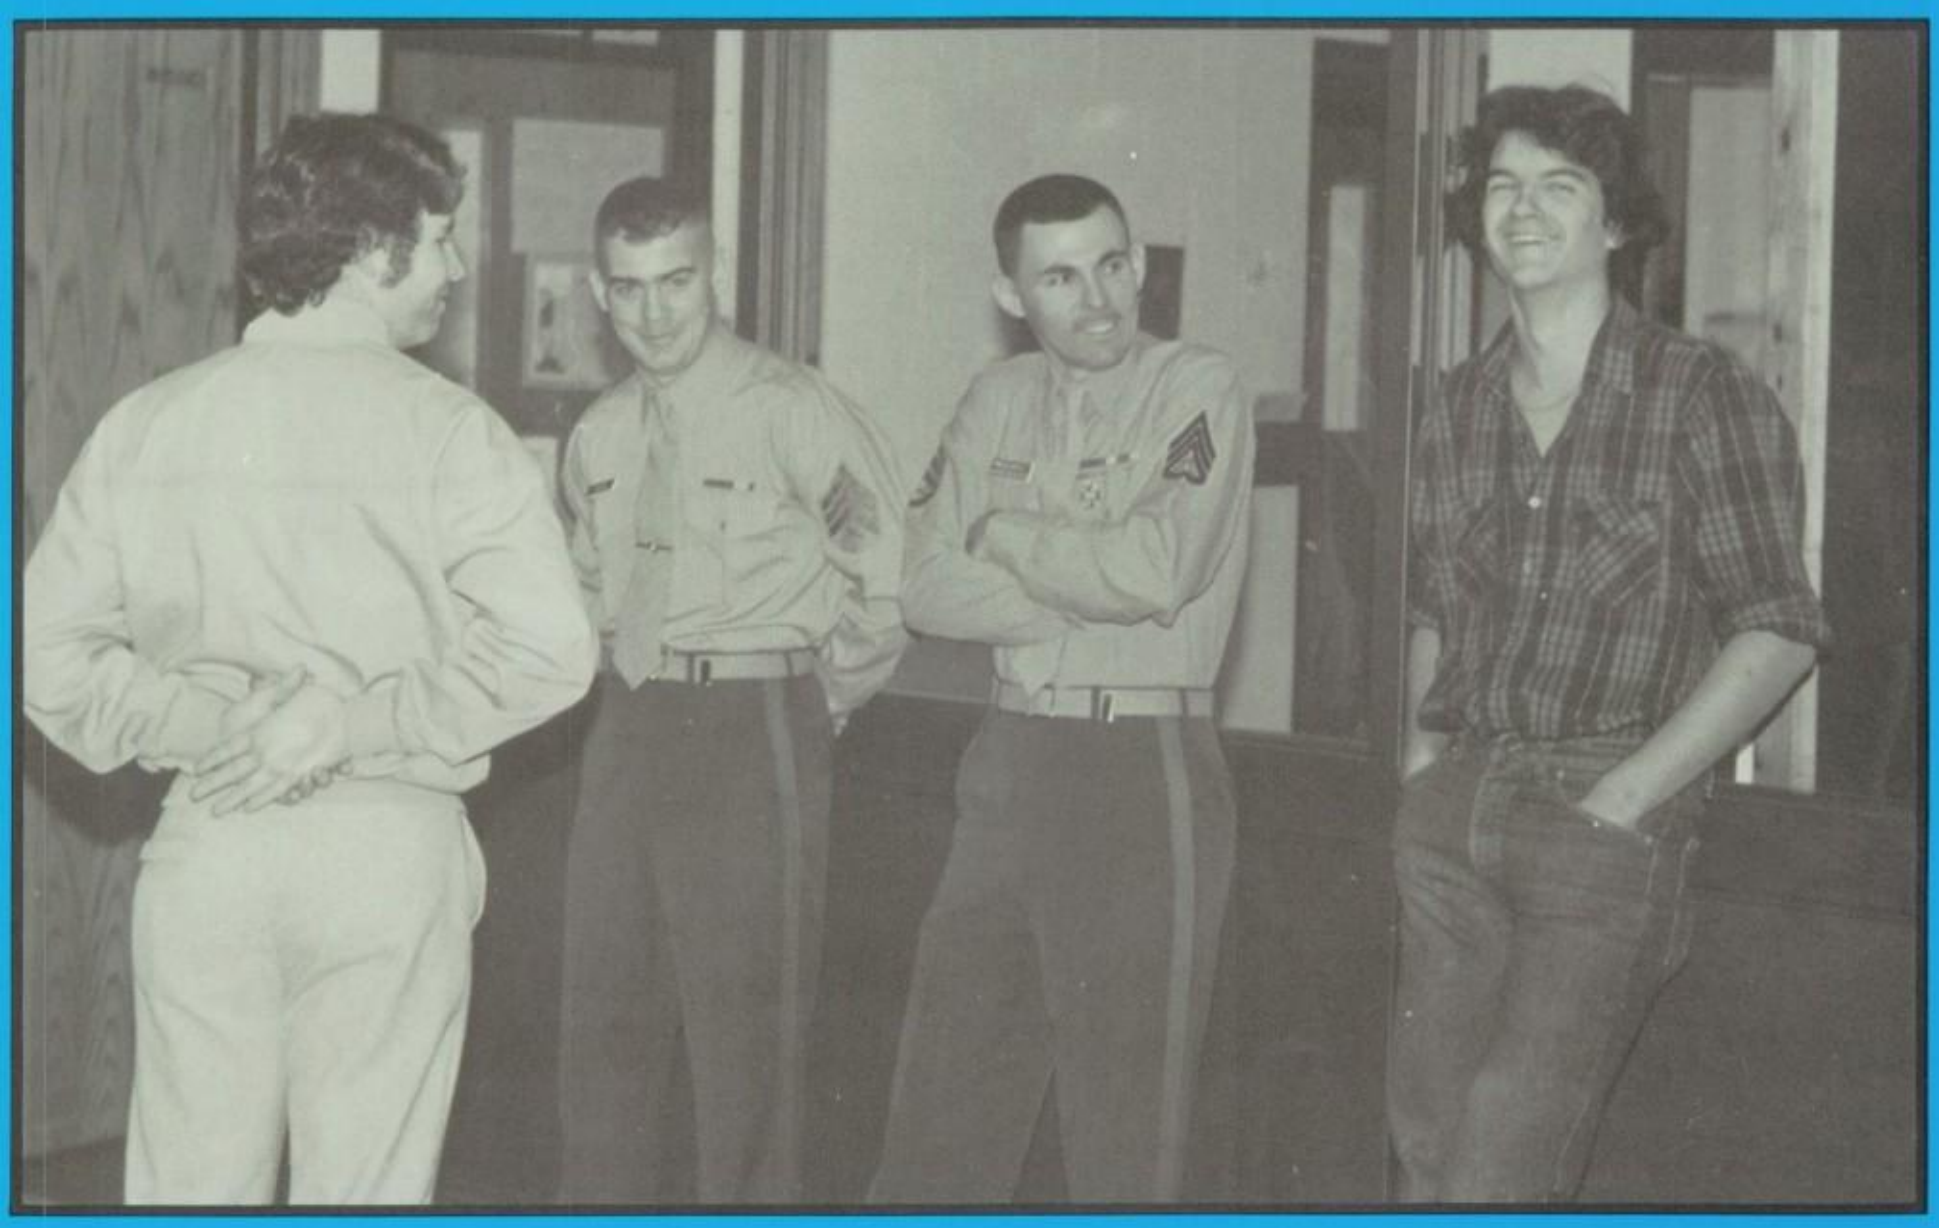


Vo-Tech students discuss plans for an upcoming project in one of their classes.

Some students used even their time between classes to make this year's efforts pay off.

Plans for some Salem students involve entering the military after graduation.





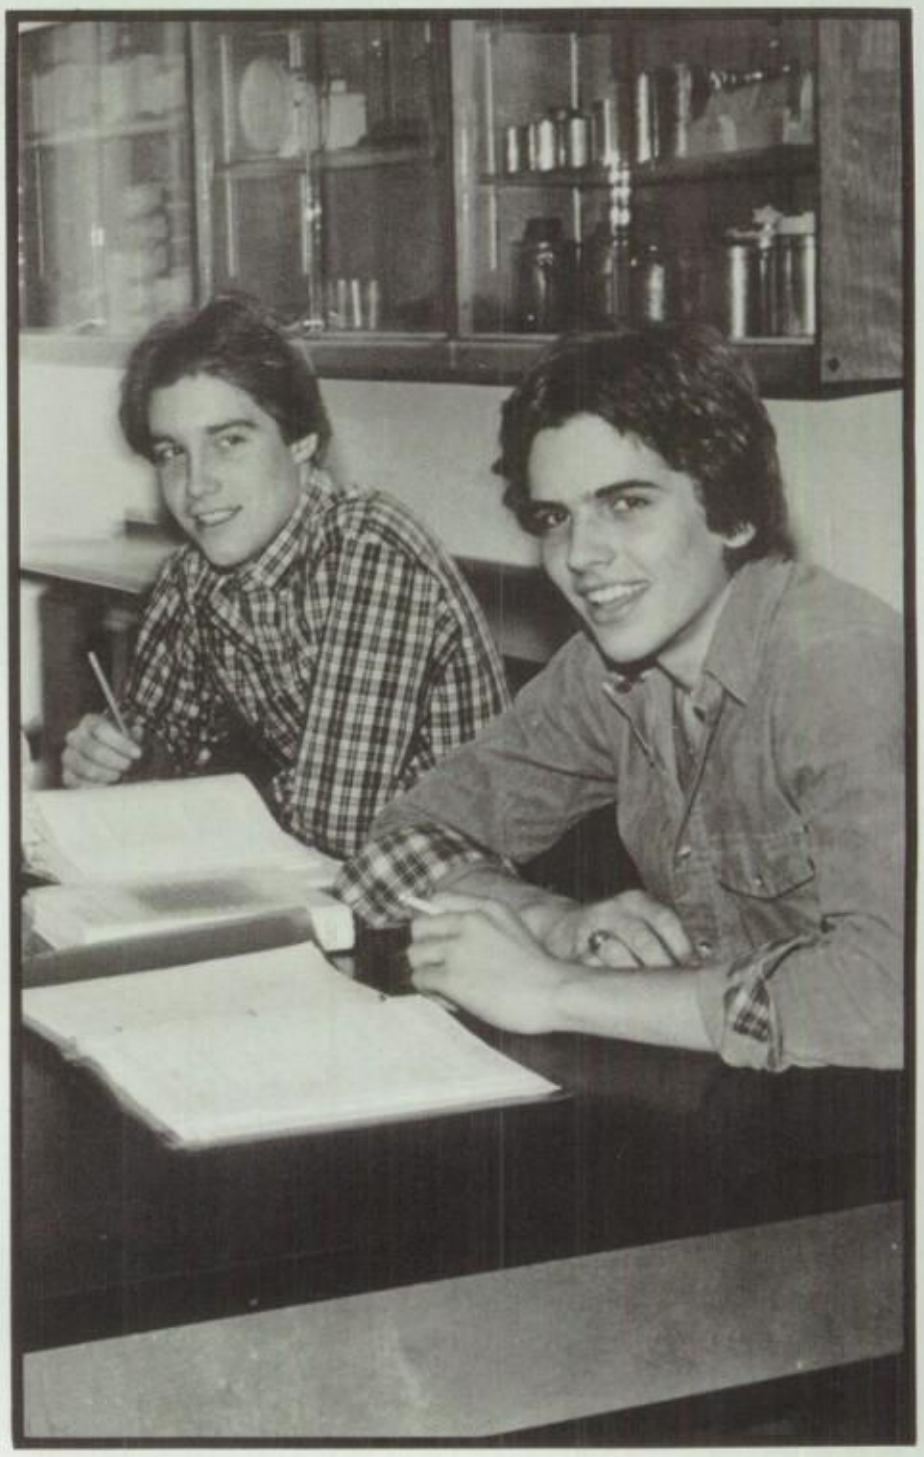
"Somehow we made it through to tell of it all"

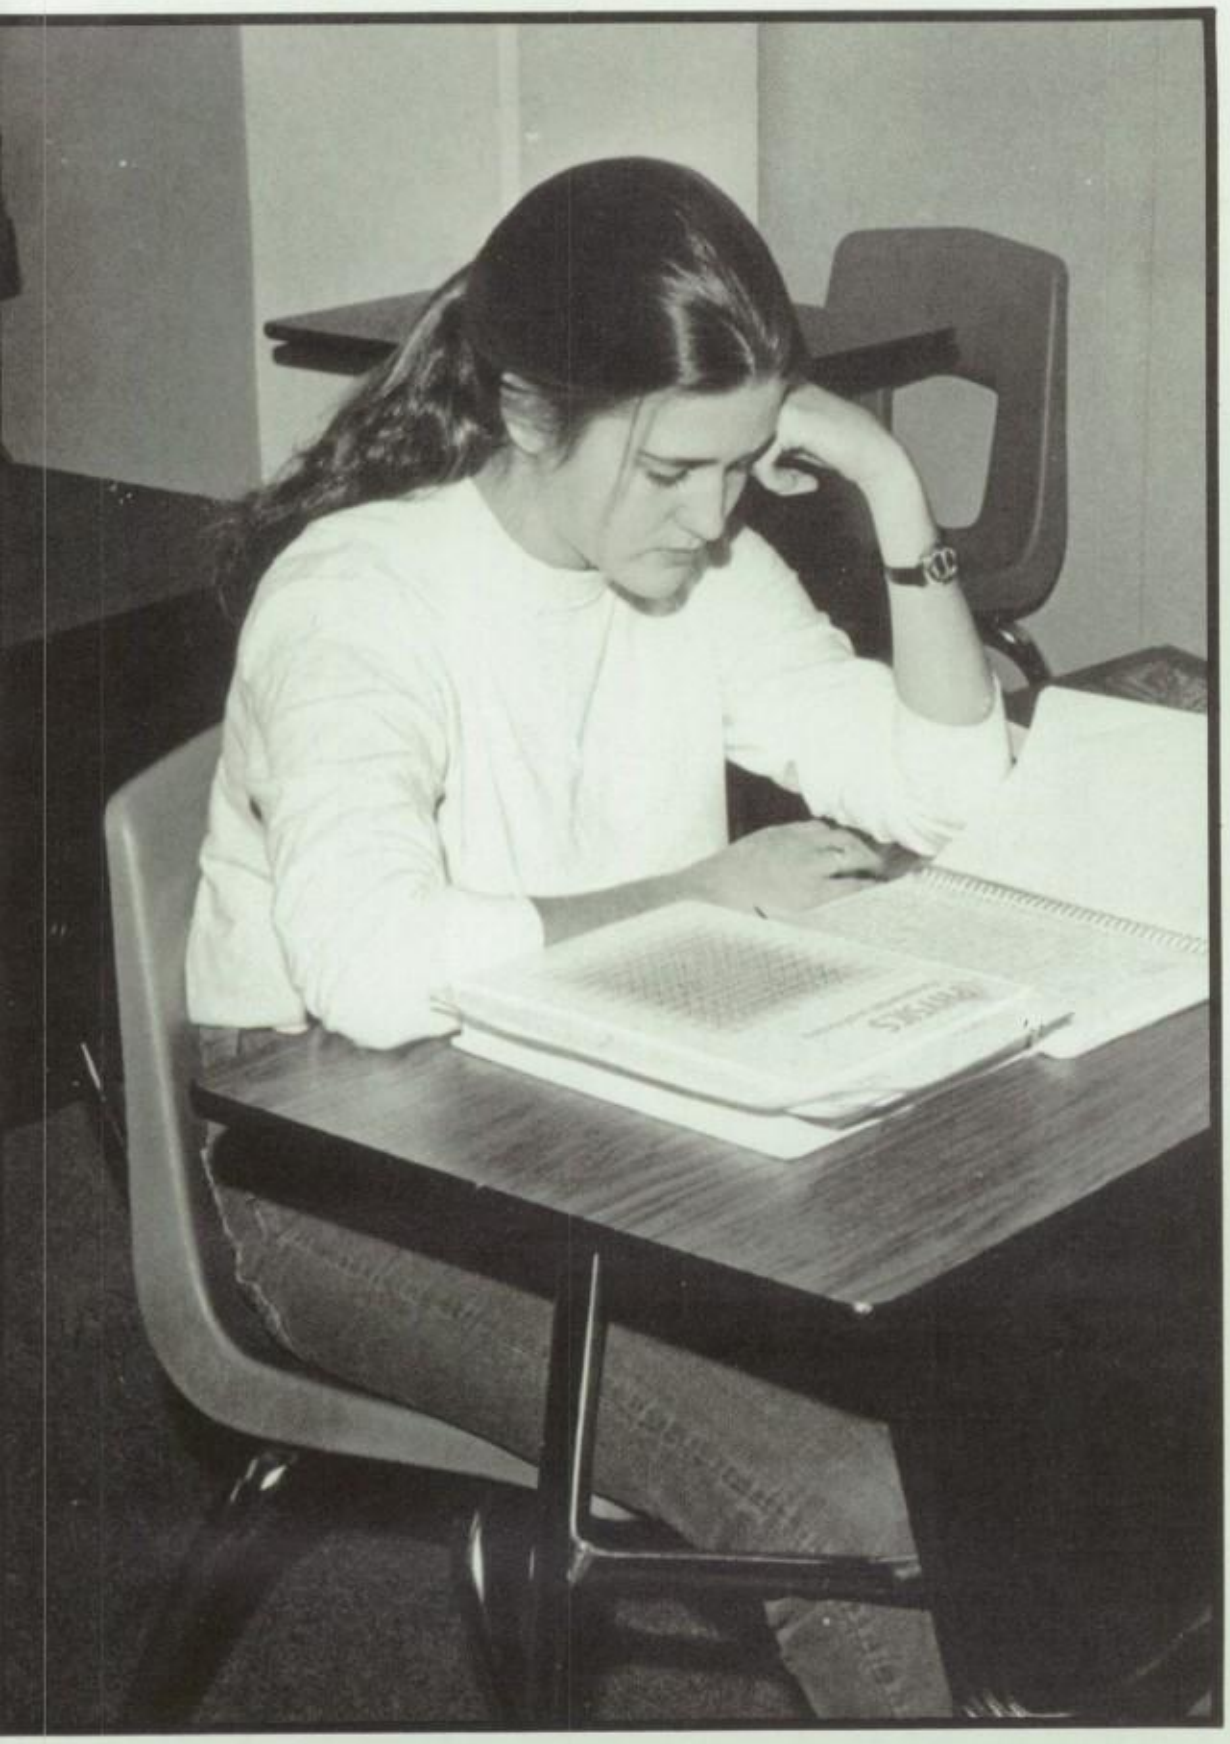
Three years of yearbook work made me, I think, more sensitive to the passage of my time at Salem High. So, though I regret the leave taking, I think I have savored the moments and have appreciated the atmosphere and opportunities offered here. My sadness, then, is tempered by this awareness. Somehow, through the spirit that is Salem in 1982 we have made it through, and hopefully, our story has been captured in this yearbook and will live in our memories as a very special year.

Teresa Clapp, Gillian Grey, and Sheila Muth pass the time in the guidance office as they wait to check their names for their diplomas.

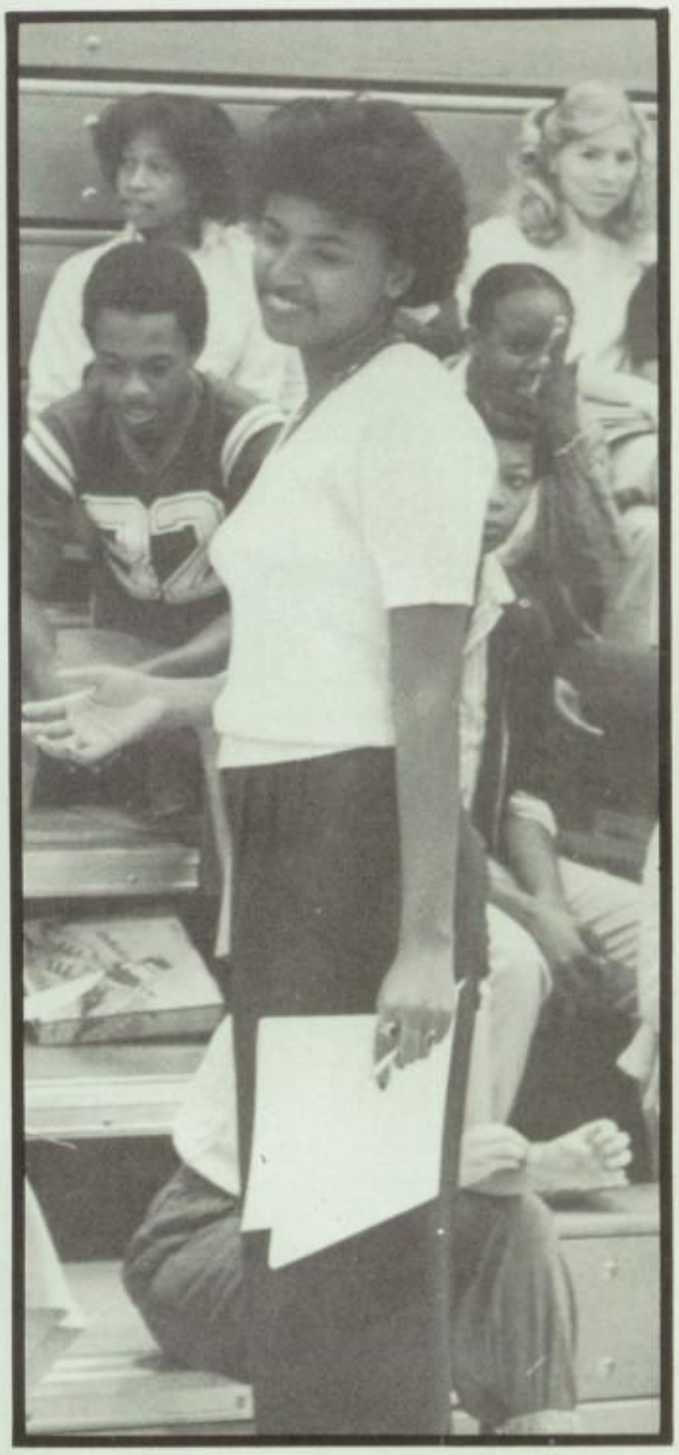
Rena Stockton puts the finishing touches on her exam before turning it in.

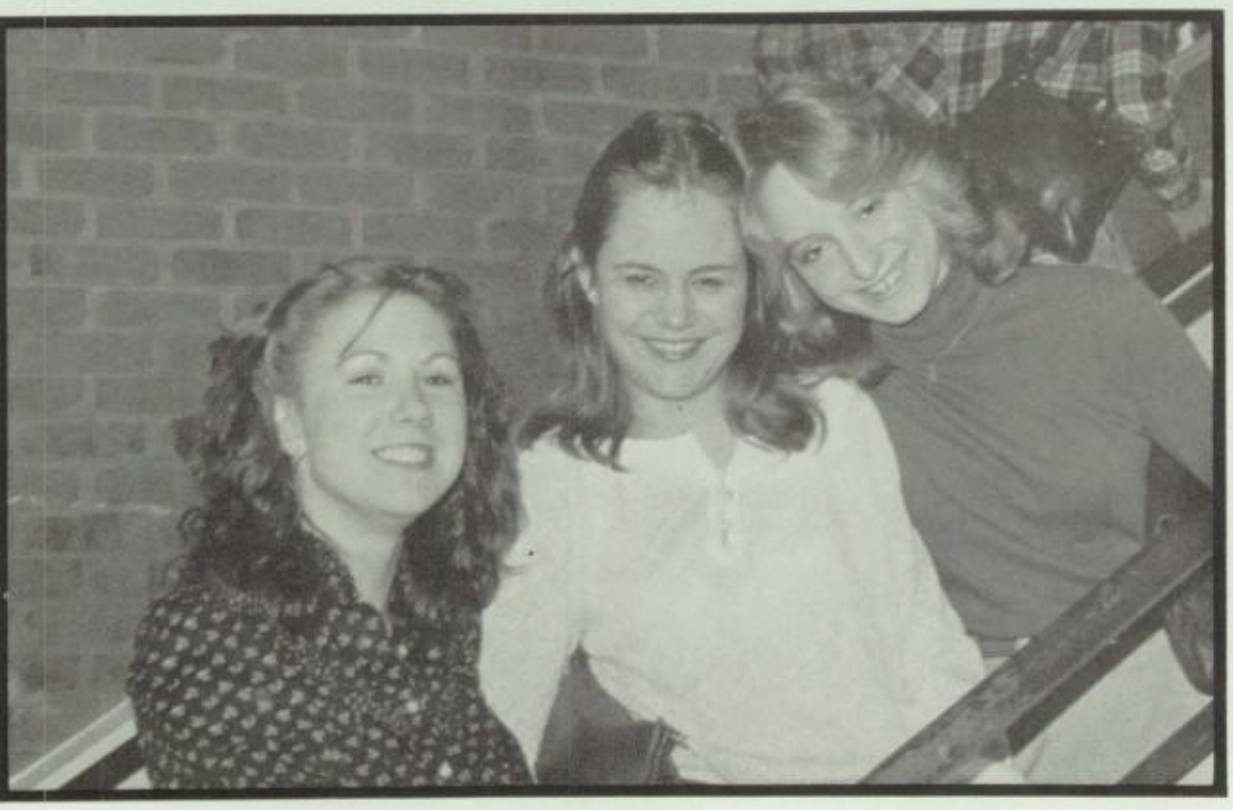
Larry Light and Mark Weddle begin to feel the pressures lifting as the year moves toward June.





Jill Deegan knows if she can just get through her physics exam, the end will be in sight.





Sharon Ferguson seems satisfied with the Pep Club's efforts at the last meeting of the year.

Suzanne Bell, Glenda Lemon and Sara Fuhrman were among many who formed new friendships during the year.

To acknowledge excellence . . .

Two special tributes . . .

For a lifetime of service and dedication to their profession; for a lifetime of inspiration and help to their students, we pause to recognize Mrs. Annie C. Aldridge and Mrs. Evelyn Blake in this, their final year of teaching.

and a token of our esteem

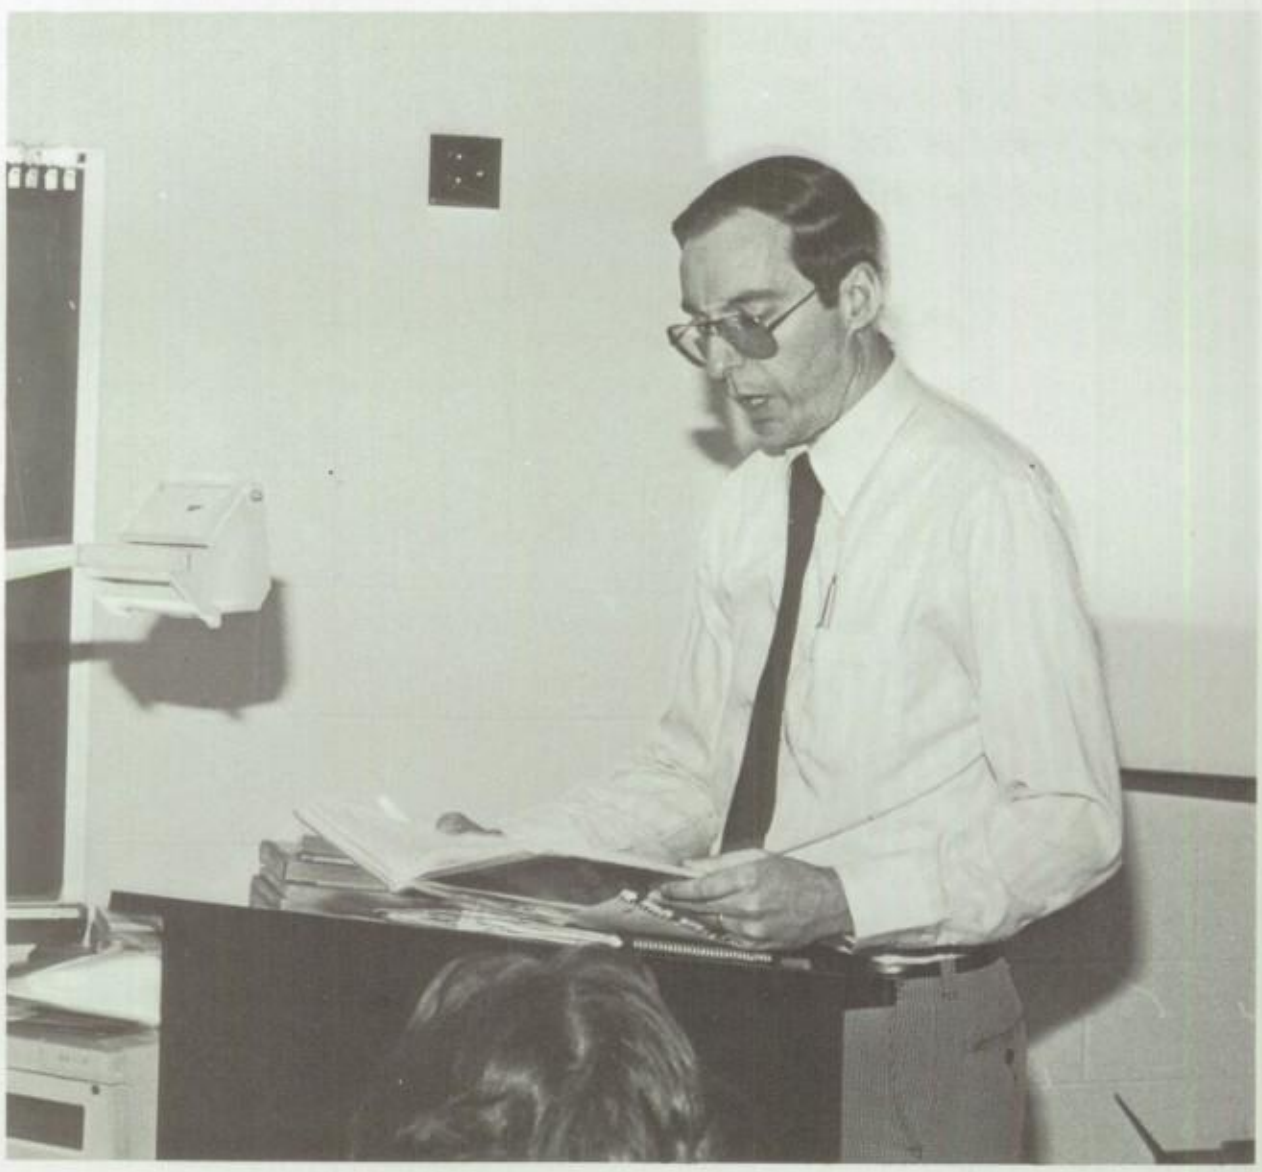
Salem High School truly has a competent and caring staff; however, one member in particular stands out in the minds of the Spartans:

— He has an understanding nature and great concern for others . . .
— He has the ability to inspire study among his students and to make learning a challenge, rather than a chore . . .
— He is demanding, yet highly respected by his students . . .
— He walks quietly among his peers, but his influence is profound among those with whom he comes in contact . . .
— He appreciates the abilities,interests, and personalities of all . . .
— He can even make the x, y, and z of the mathematical world appeal to our sense of humor.

Because of these special qualities possessed by this special member of our Spartan family, we, the 1982 Laconian staff, dedicate this edition to you, Mr. Gary Basham, with our deepest respect and appreciation.

Latin took on new meaning with this magnificent lady.

Application of skills and knowledge was always the emphasis in Mrs. Blake's home-ec classes.



Quality teaching was always in evidence in Mr. Basham's math classes.

Jesse,
Hi! This year was great except for Kolmer's class. I hate that class so much. Just think - we might get her again next year! I wish I was joking - but she does teach English 11. Disgusting! It was great having ya in my homeroom, English, Short Story classes. I hope you're in some of my classes next year! Have fun this summer + don't party too hard! Good luck passing Kolmer's class! Have a great summer + Keep in touch (389-1528) Love ya!

Jesse,

Well can you believe this year has almost come to an end. Ive really enjoyed getting to know you better this past year and I will miss you when I move on to GLENVAR. I want to wish you luck with what ever you plan to do. Be good + STAY COOL OVER the summer.

LOVE YA
Carla

Jesse,
It's been great knowing you!
I don't know really what to say - Anyway I'll think of something & it will all be true -
It will just take me a couple of minutes - I've had a great time in the classes you are in with moi - And I hope next year we have more classes together next year. HOPE YOU HAVE A GOOD Summer! YOU ARE A GREAT GUY!
HOPE TO SEE YOU OVER THE SUMMER.
HAVE A GOOD SUMMER. FRIENDS FOREVER
SARAH BELL.

P.S. Don't forget MRS.
Kofner's hair
everything she wears her hair matches
it.
